U. S. Closes Pacific Atoll For Atomic Test Base

Scientists to Try New Weapons on Lonely Eniwetok; Natives to Move

By John Norris
Post Reporter

The United States has begun construction of elaborate "proving grounds" at Eniwetok—isolated mid-Pacific atoll—for experiments and tests of ney-type atomic weapons, it was announced last night.

A joint release from the Atomic Energy Commission, State Department and National Defense Establishment said that native inhabitants of the coral islands will be moved elsewhere and the entire area closed to ships, planes and all visitors.

Construction of the atomic testing ground was put in the hands of the United States armed forces, but it was said that peaceful as well as military experiments in atomic energy would be carried on there.

Was Navy Secret Base

Eniwetok, a roughly circular atoll 20 to 25 miles in diameter, was captured from the Japs in February, 1944. It was converted into the "secret base" of the United States Fleet from which furher island conquests were launched in the march across the Pacific.

When the war ended, preparations for the invasion of Japan were under way there. Now its two airfields and huge anchorage will be used for further development of the weapon which made that invasion unnecessary.

The atoll was one of the former German Pacific isles seized by the Japanese in World War I and held by them under a mandate from the old League of Nations. Under an agreement approved by the United Nations earlier this year, the United States assumed a "strategic trusteeship" over them which gives us the right to bar even U. N. officials from visiting an area we close to outsiders.

Complete Facilities Planned

Details of the new atomic proving ground were a closely guarded secret but the joint announcement said that "complete facilities" will be provided.

"Housing, utilities, communications, protective structures, instrumentation circuits and control and observation posts" will be built, it was said. Some of the military installations used during the war will be rehabilitated, the announcement added.

"The purpose of the installations now under construction in the Pacific," it stated, "is to provide a suitable area for the continuing conduct of a wide range of field work to establish by experimentation the indicated results of laboratory studies carried out in facilities of the Atomic Energy Commission.

"The scientific and technical operations of the proving ground will provide new fundamental data and a broader understanding of the phenomena of nuclear fission which will facilitate advances in peaceful as well as in military applications of atomic energy."

Bikini Held Inadequate

Eniwetok was chosen as the site of the proving ground, it was said, after all other available Pacific islands were surveyed. Bikini—scene of the A-bomb test last year—lacks sufficient land area.

There are approximately 40 coral islands ringing Eniwetok Atoll. Two of them Eniwetok Island and Roi-Namur—were wartime air bases but were abandoned last year.

One important factor in the choice is Eniwetok's isolated position. Hundreds of miles of open seas surround the atoll in the directions "in which winds might carry radioactive particles," it was said.

After the Bikini tests it was reported, without official confirmation, that the particles were wafted thousands of miles, as far as the West Coast of the United States.

Eniwetok is only 322 miles from Bikini, but remote from any populated area of any size. Western-

By V. R. Montanari

Sharon Meenehan, who will be 3 on Thursday, failed to appreciate the honor of having the President of the United States visit her yesterday in her room at the Georgetown University Hospital.

She thought her mother said something about a "present," and was so disappointed when it turned out to be only "the President," that she just stared at the smiling visitor when he asked how she was feeling.

"I'm sorry, Mr. President," said her mother, Mrs. Mary Frances Meenehan, trembling slightly, "but I'm afraid she doesn't realize your importance."

With a broad smile, Mr. Truman said, "I wish a lot of other people didn't realize my importance!"

The President's visit to Sharon, who was all bandaged and trussed, with her legs suspended from pulleys because she was struck by an automobile about two weeks ago, came just after he had dedicated the hospital's new children's wing, where Sharon will probably be the first patient. The accident had fractured her skull, a neck vertebra, both thighs and her pelvis.

Wife Sees Meyers As Desperate Man Seeking to Escape By Attacking Her

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Mrs. Mildred Lamarre, the beautiful brunette with whom Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers claimed a wartime "love affair" yesterday pictured her accuser as "a desperate man," lashing out with false and "terrible" charges in a frenzied effort to escape jail.

The slim young wife of Bleriot Lamarre, $51.50-a-week "dummy" president of the Aviation Electric Co., which Meyers said he founded because Mrs. Lemarre was his "girl friend," went before a Federal grand jury here yesterday as a State's witness to help the Government prove its case against the retired AAF procurement officer.

Mrs. Lamarre, whose husband has described Meyers as "a snake and liar," has denied the bald, 52-year old major general's claim that he had a love affair with her, and that this was what prompted him to establish the lushly profitable Aviation Electric Company.

The trim young brunette, former college beauty contest winner, spent an hour and 10 minutes before a 23-member grand jury, which court attaches described as a "cross-section" of Washington.

Low, Pleasant Voice

Mrs. Lamarre, who has hazel eyes, black curls and a flawless pink and white skin suggestive of her British-Dutch descent, appeared before the grand jury wearing a gray sharkskin suit, a gray squirrel coat and a new peaked, feathered gray turban.

To this reporter, Mrs. Lamarre described Meyers as "a desperate man," wildly seeking escape by attacking someone else.

In her low, pleasant voice, Mrs. Lamarre said firmly, "I was the only one left that he could hit."

"His testimony," she said, "was the action of a desperate man. He had two alternatives after my husband changed his testimony and admitted the true story. He could admit to the truth or he could tell something terrible that he thought might excuse him.

"I was the only one left that he could hit. We haven't any children.

"Nobody in Dayton believes any of that stuff. The only bright ray in this whole ordeal is the way our friends are standing by us—even people who didn't know us very well have told us of their sympathy.

"His last suggestion, that my husband was having an affair with my brother's wife, that's just too ridiculous for words."

'My Husband Is Wonderful'

Then with a radiant smile, the slim brunette turned and squarely faced her questioner:

"My husband is wonderful—just wonderful."

She emerged from the grand jury room nervous but smiling, and a little worried because she had nervously worked off all her lipstick as she testified.

Assistant District Attorney Edward Molenoff made it clear he did not want the witness to discuss her testimony.

However, the case is the outgrowth of the hearings before the Senate War Investigating Committee, and it is known that at this time the District Attorney and his assistants are presenting evidence concerning charges of perjury and subornation of perjury (the act of getting someone else to lie under oath) against Meyers.

Stopgap Measure, Passed, 83 to 6, Allows 597 Million For Europe Relief

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday approved a 597-million-dollar interim aid authorization for France, Italy and Austria by the overwhelming vote of 83 to 6.

The Senate stopgap bill, carrying the full amount requested by the Administration, was sped to the House. There it collided with a bill providing a smaller relief total, but a broadened aid scope.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee completed a bill of its own whittling interim aid to Western Europe to 530 million dollars but carrying 60 million dollars additional for China.

House Bill in Today

The House bill, which will be reported to that chamber today, with debate starting later this week, thus provided 590-million-dollar over-all for western Europe and the Orient combined.

The 530 million dollars provided for France, Italy and Austria was 41 million dollars higher, however, than the amount approved by the House committee last week. At that time the House group voted a 108-million-dollar slash for western Europe.

To meet possible delays in appropriatiag aid funds, the House bill authorized the RFC to advance 150 million dollars of the total for immediate use.

The top-heavy Senate vote for the full authorization will lend force to a bipartisan drive to restore the cuts completely on the House floor.

How Parties Lined Up

Forty-four Republicans joined with 39 Democrats to speed the unimpaired Senate authorization to the House.

Only three Democrats and three Republicans voted "no." They were:

Senators William Langer (R., N. Dak.), E. H. Moore (R., Okla.), Edward V. Robertson (R., Wyo.), Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), W. Lee O'Daniel (D., Tex.), and Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho).

Senate passage, on the "deadline" date set by Secretary of State George C. Marshall for getting relief to France, followed a week of steady plugging by Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

Vandenberg urged the Senate to pass the bill immediately or say in effect: "We aren't going to this fire."

Minor Amendments Only

"We can get the most for our money by acting promptly," said the Michigan Republican. "We can buy the most freedom at the moment by acting with vigor and dispatch."

Only relatively minor amendments were added to the Senate bill. One of these was accepted reluctantly by Vandenberg, with a promise to work it out in conference.

As proposed by Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), it would have required a lengthy "gift" label on each relief item. As adopted it required notification of recipients that the goods were furnished by this country "without charge" to

Jewish Force Repulses Arabs Attacking on Tel Aviv Border

Plan for Governing Jerusalem Will Be Drawn by U. N. Group

Lake Success, N. Y., Dec. 2 (U.P.).—The United Nations trusteeship council acted swiftly today toward setting up international control of Jerusalem, as provided in the U. N. program to partition Palestine.

The council authorized its president, Francis B. Sayre of the United States, to appoint a five-or six-man committee to write detailed plans for governing Jerusalem.

The city—holy to Christians, Jews and Moslems—will be administered under the 12-nation trusteeship council, and will not be part either of the Arab or Jewish states into which Palestine will be partitioned.

The decision to set up the drafting committee was made by a vote of 9 to 1.

The Palestine problem was put ahead of all other trusteeship council business after Sayre explained the urgency of the situation and said the council might have to hold a special session early next year to consider the working committee's recommendations.

One of the council's first tasks will be selecting a governor of Jerusalem. He may not be a citizen of either the Jewish or Arab states in Palestine.

Gunfire, Explosions Protest Partition as Bands Rove Streets

BULLETIN

Tel Aviv, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Jews opened 12 recruiting centers in Palestine today from the Sea of Galilee to the Negeb, and plastered billboards throughout the country with "mobilization notices" alerting men and women from 17 to 25 years for an imminent call-up. Notices warned Jews they might at any moment be "thrust into a position which will necessitate mobilization of manpower."

Jerusalem, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—A Jewish fighting force tonight repulsed 250 to 300 Arabs who attacked along border streets between the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv and all-Arab Jaffa.

One Jew was killed and four Jews and two Polish Christians were wounded.

Arab bands, seeking reprisal for the United Nations' decision to partition Palestine between Jews and Arabs, roved through city streets and country roads, punctuating their protests with gunfire and bomb blasts.

Meanwhile, Palestine prepared for further outbursts tomorrow when a three-day Arab general strike is scheduled to begin.

Communists Stay In Assembly All Night and Day to Prevent Action

Paris, Tuesday, Dec. 2 (A.P.).—Communist deputies, determined not to be deprived of their votes against Premier Robert Schuman's drastic antistrike bill, occupied the chamber of the National Assembly in relays earlier today, several hours after a session broke up in a near riot.

(So acute was the crisis, the United Press reported that French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault rushed back from London during the night, temporarily abandoning the Big Four Ministers' Conference. He went by train and boat, though heavy fogs had made all travel perilous.)

Edouard Herriot, president of the assembly, suspended the session last night when it became so tumultous that it was impossible to restore order. The session ended before the deputies could enact the powerful strike control bill the government wants to use to break the Communist hold on the labor movement.

Remain Through Night

Communist deputies relieved each other in teams throughout the night in occupying the assembly chamber after one of them refused to accept a vote of censure for "inciting the army to revolt" which would expel him temporarily.

A Communist spokesman said his colleagues were remaining in the hall in case Herriot tried to convene the deputies into session without notifying the Communists, who have been struggling since Saturday afternoon to prevent a final vote.

Disorder broke out in the chamber when the Communist refused to accept the censure and his colleagues supported him with shouts and catcalls.

Wave of Strikes Ensues

With the assembly out of session, a creeping industrial and transportation paralysis, caused by a wave of strikes which have left more that two million idle, gripped the nation.

A new strike tied up three power plants yesterday, leaving many Paris homes without lights last night, halting the Paris subway, crippling other public utilities and closing theaters and movies. Garbage went uncollected and the streets of Paris went unswept for the third day because of a walkout of municipal employes.

Thousands of angry citizens, groping their way on foot in severe weather, reached darkened homes and ate cold suppers because of a lack of gas.

Calas Censured

The incident began when Herriot demanded and obtained a vote of censure against Communist Deputy Raoul Calas for calling on army reservists to refuse to answer the government's call-up order. The government has increased the strength of the military force by 300,000 men since the strike crisis began two weeks ago.

Calas, a deputy from the Herault Department, refused to leave the speaker's rostrum after the vote of censure which also directed his temporary expulsion from the chamber. Herirot thereupon suspended the session until tomorrow afternoon to avoid having to expel the Communist by force. The action was taken amid a tumult of catcalls and curses between the Communists and the other deputies.

The Communists remained in their seats as the other deputies finally filed out. Florimond Bonte, the Communist spokesman, said Herriot wanted to reconvene the Assembly in such a way that "some parties would not receive the convocation order." He declared relays of Communists would maintain a continuous occupation of the chamber to make sure this did not happen.

Refuses to Leave

Shortly after the session broke up Herriot sent the colonel in command of the Assembly's police into the chamber to request Calas to leave the building. Calas refused.

Strikes reduced gas pressure in Paris homes to the "danger level." Water pressure fell rapidly. The miners walkout cut deeply into the nation's coal stockpile.

Sabotage continued. The Paris-

Real Estate Groups Deny Fee-Fixing

National Body Says It Was Ignorant of Commission Move

The National Association of Real Estate Boards answered Government fee-fixing charges yesterday by declaring that it had no knowledge of the rise in brokerage fees recommended by the local board in 1943.

Answers were filed in the District Court by the national board and the Washington board, including individual members. They were similar in most respects. Both boards are also under criminal indictment charging violation of antitrust laws.

In yesterday's development, a civil matter, the Government has asked the court to enjoin the defendants from continuing alleged fee fixing.

Control Denied

Both boards, in their answers, denied that "members of the Washington board control at least 50 per cent of the total volume of sales, exchange, lease and management of real estate in the District."

"Membership of the Washington board is about 250," Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for the national group, said.

"There are more than 1900 licensed to engage in the brokerage business here," he declared, adding, "How could the tail be wagging the dog?"

The Washington Board admitted that the organization had "adopted a schedule of commissions setting forth standard rates of commissions" but denied that the schedule "fixes" such rates.

Fast Growth Of Arlington Chest Problem

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Second of a series on area Chest Organizations

Almost as if drawn by a magnet, the people flocked in.

They came in such numbers that they submerged the surface characteristics of the persons who already were there. They were possessed of a vigorous vocality which they used to advantage to make their wants known.

And now when you talk about Arlington County, you don't think about it as being a "sleepy" little suburb, but a growing metropolis which, since 1900, has increased 17 times faster than has the District of Columbia.

Nobody knows exactly how many people live in Arlington now, or which type of wage earner is predominant.

Services Fall Behind

You can't very well say that there is any spot in the country that is "sparsely" settled, and the people are still coming to Arlington to establish their homes and raise their families.

But with all this increase in population, there just hasn't been the money to provide public services on a comparative scale. And private services to county residents—this work of the Community Chest—hasn't kept pace with the growth either.

Back in 1942, when Arlington threw in its lot with the then Community War Fund, a budget of about $60,000 was asked for county community agencies. The 1947 budget as approved was only $90,000.

Community Chest officials in Arlington know they are not giv-

Verdict Coming Today

Raedy Ruled Out Drunk Test On Traffic Death Defendant

A jury yesterday returned a sealed verdict on a traffic death case in which Municipal Judge Ellen K. Raedy had ruled out evidence of drunken driving.

The verdict, submitted after 30 minutes' deliberation, will be opened at 10 a. m. today to determine the guilt or innocence of Rodney G. Darneille, 38, of 2720 Ordway st. nw.

He went to trial charged with negligent homicide in the death of his wife, E[illegible], in a two-car crash on Memorial Bridge April 20.

The verdict was sealed because Municipal Court Judge Nathan R. Margold, who had heard the case, was called to a doctor's appointment during jury deliberations.

Judge Raedy had the defendant's motion to suppress the drunken driving testimony under advisement since July 2. On October 29, she ruled on the motion, advising the United States Attorney's Office the defendant's request had been granted.

The motion was under advisement at the time Judge Raedy forfeited $200 collateral rather than face trial on charges growing out of a collision in which her car figured August 19.

Darneille's action in filing to suppress the drunk driving evidence was made by his attorney, Milton Kaplan, on grounds that Darneille was unconscious from crash injuries when blood tests were taken to determine intoxication. Police said his blood contained .24 per cent alcohol. They consider .15 per cent sufficient evidence of drunkenness.

Kaplan contended the test was illegal because Darneille was unconscious and could not give his

Arrests for 'Investigation' Seen Violation of Civil Rights

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A former police commissioner and a former judge, presently members of Congressional District Committees, yesterday denounced the police practice of arresting persons on the open charge of "investigation."

At the same time, a spokesman for the Washington Criminal Justice Association suggested that the police practice should be limited by legislation, with safeguards against abusing the power written into the law.

As disclosed by The Washington Post Sunday, 13,000 persons here were arrested, detained, and released without formal charge during the past year.

A check of police station arrest books for the 41-day period of October 1 through November 10 disclosed that many persons arrested for "investigation" were detained and confined for more than 24 hours, some for more than 48 hours. The survey indicated that the police practice, long a custom here and in operation in other cities as well, is wide open to abuses, involving the violation of civil rights.

"The police here defend the practice of arresting persons for "investigation"—a charge not on the statute books—as an aid to enforcing the law, and to protect the names of innocent persons who might otherwise be charged with a specific felony.

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N.J.) one-time deputy police commissioner of New York City, and chairman of a special House subcommittee drafting home rule and reorganization plans for the District, yesterday decried the "arrest-for-investigation" practice.

He said that a person arrested ought to be advised by the police as to what crime he is suspected of committing so that the suspect can take the necessary steps to obtain his freedom."

Auchincloss asserted that he favored giving the Police Department every facility for suppression and prevention of crime, but added: "However, it is contrary to our concept of freedom to put a man in jail without letting him know what the charge is against him."

As to the police practice of arresting several suspects on a general description and booking them all for "investigation" until the most likely suspects can be charged for the specific crime—such a prac-

Western Zones Of Germany May Be United

France Hints Action As Disagreements Stall London Parley

London, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Convoking of a three-power conference to merge the American, British and French zones of Germany appeared a possibility tonight as the Foreign Ministers Conference staggered from disagreement to disagreement amid a flood of Soviet attacks against the Western powers.

[Hopeof agreement between Russia and the western powers grew dimmer tonight, when, the United Press reported, French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault abandoned the conference, at least temporarily, and rushed back to Paris, where his government was locked in battle with the Communists for control of the nation.

[During his absence, which it was hoped would last only a day or so, major decisions by the Big Four will be impossible.

Informed sources asserted one reason for his departure was a threat by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, emerging right wing leader, to "veto" any decision on Germany by the Big Four which he did not approve, should he gain political power in France.

[His fellow delegates feared the French crisis may shatter all hopes of agreement on the German and Austrian peace treaties.

["Here," said an American delegate, "the east and the west—Russia and the western Allies—are sparring for time while the issue is being joined in Paris. We debate with words here. In Paris, the cold war is being 'fought' in the streets and in the Chamber of Deputies. If the Communists win in Paris our arguments here will become even more academic."]

House Delays Threaten Aid Cargo Tie-up

Coal, Food in Ports Can't Move Until Italy And France Get Dollars

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The slow-moving House of Representatives' time table on interim aid threatened yesterday to pile up grain and coal at American ports and to interrupt the flow of vitally needed American supplies to Italy and France.

A State Department official confirmed yesterday that Italy had already run out of dollars and had none immediately in sight except what Congress would provide. Secretary Marshall warned the Congressional Foreign Policy Committees on November 10 that Italy would be dollarless by now.

France still has enough dollars to continue purchasing here through December, but, oddly enough, an interruption of supplies for France is at least as threatening as in the case of Italy.

French Planned Differently

The French had hoped to use their last 100 million dollars this month to pay for chemicals, lumber and industrial raw materials from the United States and elsewhere. These items are not covered in the interim relief bill now before Congress, which limited to food, fuel, fertilizer, seeds, fibers and medical supplies.

The French had planned, for example, to import sulphur, rubber goods and chemicals from the United States, zinc ore from Newfoundland and Latin America, and lead from Mexico and Peru, to keep their factories going during January and to keep their zone of Germany supplied.

Now, however, the French are forced to use their dollars to pay for American grain and coal because the congressional authoriza-

Meat Controls Advisable Now, Harriman Tells House Group

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman told Congress yesterday that the Administration would consider applying rationing and price controls to meat at once" if the powers were granted.

Testifying before the House Banking and Currency Committee, Harriman said that meat was the area of greatest present difficulty and would be given attention immediately if Congress approved the necessary authority.

The meat situation next spring, he pointed out, will be very tight. Competitive bidding for it, he pointed out, "might set off an inflationary spiral that would be serious."

He emphasized, however, that food was not under the scope of his department. Those price controls that he, in the Department of Commerce, would invoke first, he said, would be applied to stamping out the "gray market" in steel, and profiteering in the export market.

Textiles, aluminum, building materials and newsprint were other fields, he indicated, where price attention might be given.

Federal Grand Jury Hears Mrs. Lamarre in Meyers Case

"dummy" president of Aviation Electric, testified before the committee that Meyers came to him early this year and outlined "a concocted story" to account to the committee for the profits from the company.

The general sat "in my favorite armchair" Lamarre said, and dictated fake letters to Mrs. Lamarre, Meyers' ex-secretary, to support the concocted story.

On the stand, Lamarre said he once swore to this story under oath before the committee, but had to break down and admit the truth, which was, he said, that Meyers' got the money.

Then Mrs. Meyers was asked about that anonymous letter of complaint about General Meyers' activities which went to the Army Air Force in June, 1945, and was promptly buried without action in a file labeled "secret."

Caused An Uproar

The letter, suggesting an investigation of Meyers, has caused an uproar which has set the whole Air Force by its ears, caused the Air Inspector, Maj. Gen. Junius W. (Jingling) Jones to spend three uncomfortable sessions in a red-hot witness chair trying to explain why the Air Force didn't act, and prompted lengthy and embarrassed explanations from Air Secretary W. Stewart Symington and top Air Force brass.

"Don't you think some of those phrases in that letter, such as the statement that several top-ranking officers 'are rather smelly in their personal and private transactions, sounded a bit feminine, as if a woman wrote the letter?" Mrs. Lamarre was asked.

Agrees Cautiously

"It did sound a trifle like a woman," the trim brunette agreed cautiously.

"Well, to be blunt about it, did you write that letter?" came the next question.

"Oh no, I certainly did not. I didn't know anything about that. I wouldn't have done that," Mrs. Lamarre replied.

Mrs. Lamarre appeared a little amused at descriptions of her in the Nation's newspapers as a former college beauty contest winner.

"I wasn't really the winner," she said, and explained that at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, where she and her 35-year-old blond husband met, 12 girls were originally selected as college beauties.

Didn't Weep, She Says

Then six were picked in the semifinals, she said, and added, "And I wasn't in that six."

She was a member of Beta Sigma Omicron Sorority, Mrs. Lamarre told a reporter.

When Mrs. Lamarre emerged from the jury room, she was asked if she were weeping.

"That's what you're looking for," she said to reporters, "but I just didn't."

A little later as photographers tried to get "just one more picture," she attempted to wave them off.

"You boys might at least wait until I've had a chance to get some lipstick on," she quipped.

FCC Disavows Durr Criticism Of FBI, But He Repeats Attack

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday officially disassociated itself from critical remarks made by one of its members against the FBI.

In a letter to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, the FCC asked to "express its confidence in the FBI" and to continue to receive from it information on matters within the FCC's jurisdiction.

But Commissioner Clifford J. Durr, who had started the hullaballoo by saying that the FBI was supplying the FCC with "unsolicited reports" of "business gossip," stuck by his guns.

In a statement inserted in the FCC minutes, Durr yesterday took exception to the letter to Hoover and expanded his original complaint about the sort of material which the FBI had been furnishing.

Radio Witch-Hunt Feared

The controversy began two weeks ago when columnist Marquis Childs reported a speech by Durr on October 26, quoting the commissioner's fear that the radio industry would be the next "victim" of a witch-hunt, and citing the FBI's "unsolicited" reports.

Childs said Durr's remarks indicated that the FBI "sought to influence FCC decisions by sending reports on certain individuals to the commission."

Hoover responded with a statement that the FBI does not evaluate the reports it sends, nor seeks to influence decisions. He said the FBI merely transmits matter it believes is "of interest" to other Government agencies.

In a letter to FCC acting chairman Paul A. Walker, made public by Walker yesterday, Hoover revealed that he had also ordered the FBI to stop sending the reports to the FCC, in the absence of any official disavowal of Durr's remarks.

FBI to Resume Reports

The FCC's reply yesterday, signed by Walker, apparently was accepted as the disavowal Hoover wanted. For his office announced last night that it would resume sending the reports.

Walker had written that Durr's statement "was made on his own personal responsibility" and that he had not discussed it in advance with any other member of the FCC, nor was he purporting to be speaking for the commission.

The FCC, Walker added, "is desirous of receiving from your department information concerning matters within the jurisdiction of the commission."

But Durr, in his further statement for the FCC minutes, indicated that he was not. Nor, he implied, did he have the "confidence" in the FBI which his colleagues expressed.

He said he had no question of the FBI's efficiency or dependability in investigations of kidnaping, Mann Act violations, or of the job it did to protect the Nation against wartime sabotage. But, he added:

"The reports to which I have referred, however, do not contain any suggestion that the individuals therein described have violated any Federal laws, nor is there any indication that the information submitted was the by-product of an investigation of illegal activities."

Durr devoted a page and a half to a list of summaries of the kind of reports received from the FBI, and said he could see no value in them.

"It seems to me that it is of little help," he wrote, "to be informed that an applicant . . . was reported by an unidentified informant to have been a visitor in the residence of another individual who was reported by another unidentified source to have been identified with communistic activities. . . .

Public Hearings Required

"Or that according to a newspaper account of a political speech delivered by Vice Presidential Candidate Bricker in the 1944 campaign, the speaker charged that the Democratic Party had become the 'Hillman-Browder Communistic Party' and that the applicant had left his job with the Government to support the campaign of President Roosevelt; . . .

"Or that the applicant spoke on a forum on Anglo-Russian Cultural Exchange sponsored by Phi Beta Kappa."

Durr argued that the FCC could not deny a license to anyone except after public hearing and upon the basis of a record made at such a hearing. Information submitted to the FCC therefore, he continued, is of no value unless it is in a form appropriate for the record. It must be presented under oath by qualified witnesses, who must be available for cross-examination, Durr pointed out.

With the FBI material, Durr continued, the FCC would not know where to turn to locate the "unnamed persons and unidentified sources" and subpena them and get their testimony under oath and subject to cross-examination.

Harriman Says Meat Controls Advisable Now

explicit nature of Harriman's answers.

Wolcott at one point told the Commerce Secretary that he had never heard such "vague testimony" during his 14 years as a member of the committee. He said that on the basis of the information presented by witnesses in support of the President's anti-inflation program he would have "no idea" on how to go about drafting a bill to meet the Administration requests.

To Submit Draft Legislation

Harriman agreed to submit draft legislation for the committee's consideration.

Most of his testimony was devoted to the Administration's request for price controls and rationing. In previous appearances before the Joint Economic Committee, Harriman had dwelt on the need for allocation powers, restoration of consumer credit controls and retention of export controls.

He declared yesterday that the Administration had in mind only "limited" application of price ceilings and rationing, and had no intent of asking for or invoking a full program such as that operated by the OPA.

But Wolcott said he had heard no specific suggestions on how it was proposed to write any limitations in the law.

"How can we give you authority to limit" the application of the controls," he asked, "without giving you authority for all powers, without giving you carte blanche authority to manage our whole economy?"

Mail Opposes Controls

"What standards are we to legislate," he continued, "to avoid making the mistakes of OPA which had a deterring effect on production?"

The difficulty, he argued, was to legislate controls without impeding production.

"Aren't we taking a gamble?" he asked. The "mere existence" of the controls might create "uncertainty" which would have the most damaging effect on production, he declared.

Later, he told reporters that his mail had been running 99 to 1 against price controls.

But Harriman said it would be "reckless" if the country failed to take into account the possibility that measures short of price control might fail to stem inflation.

Denying any intent to start a program of overall Government price control, Harriman said he believed it possible to proceed on a "selective basis, and to limit controls to those items which the average family needs to live, such as food, fuel, clothing and shelter, and to those key areas in industrial production where a price rise would have ramified effects on the general level of prices."

"It is essential to have this power now in the event that the voluntary program should fail and it is necessary to impose direct controls promptly.

"If we should wait too long, the Congress may well be faced with the hard choice between disastrous delay and a hasty, ill-considered law. . . .

"Adequate advance preparation makes for fairness. I believe that it is advisable to start developing a program now rather than to risk the need of hasty action later."

Harriman asked for authority to set wages, but admitted under a barrage of questions that he did not see any area where they would have to be applied under present circumstances.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach is scheduled to discuss this wage-control phase of the Administration program this morning before the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Union Charges Politics in Aid

The Communications Workers of America (independent) yesterday accused the present session of Congress of playing "partisan politics" on price control and foreign aid, according to President Joseph A. Beirne.

The action was taken at a meeting of legislative representatives from 27 States, at the opening of a week-long session in Hotel Annapolis to develop a program of political action.

Beirne said the 31 representatives also placed the organization on record favoring "in essence" the President's domestic and foreign programs as contained in his message to Congress.

consent to the test and that he was not in police custody at the time. The attorney called it "unreasonable search and seizure."

"If evidence of drunken driving had been allowed, it would have influenced the jury," said Assistant United States Attorney Richard Roberts.

Darneille testified during the trial that his wife leaned against him as he drove across the bridge and that when he pushed her back, the car went over to the wrong side of the roadway.

His car collided with another driven by Bryce Douglas Stone, jr., 19, of Fairfax, Va., Mrs. Darneille was killed and both drivers were hospitalized.

Blow of Shrunk Savings Kills Chinese Woman

Shanghai, China, Dec. 1 (AP).—Reports from Chekiang Province said today that a 96-year-old Chinese woman died of shock when she learned that inflation had reduced the value of 50 years of savings to the price of five cigarettes.

Her hoard amounted to 4122 Chinese dollars.

Russia Selling U. S. More Than It Buys

We Need Her Chrome and Manganese Ore, Commerce Official Tells House Group

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Commerce Undersecretary William C. Foster yesterday said the Russians are sending us more goods than we're sending them.

Half our chrome ore and a third of our manganese ore come from Russia, Foster said. He added that both are vital to our steel industry and it would be hard to find other sources.

Russia also sells us furs, tobacco, cotton fibres and half our platinum—26½ million dollars worth in all in July, August and September. Our sales to Russia in those months were less than 23 million dollars.

Foster was a witness before the House Commerce Committee, which called a meeting on a resolution to order Foster's department to tell Congress all about shipments to Russia.

Denies Holding Out

The undersecretary denied his department was holding out on Congressmen who asked about these shipments. He said they could learn almost anything they wanted to know without an order. The only time Congress would have to pass a resolution, Foster said, was when it wanted data that the law says is not to be given out.

Foster did say that the Commerce Department gathers much of its data about foreign sales from private firms, which do not want their names and trade secrets made public. His prepared statement said giving out these "would be against the public interest." But when he read his statement, Foster changed "would" to "might." He told the committee he hoped Congress would not insist on knowing the names of the firms selling abroad, but that if Congress did so, the department would try to provide the information.

The resolution before the committee was offered by Representative Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) It would call on the Commerce Department to tell what railroad, farm and other heavy machinery was shipped to Russia, by what firms, when orders were placed, how payments were made and what orders were pending but unfilled. Mundt said it was not enough to know the dollar value of the exports, that he felt Congress ought to know the exact items.

Foster told the committee there was no way to report the unfilled orders, because they were handled by private business. As for the items shipped, he said such a breakdown was given the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a few days ago, and that the House could have it, too. Besides that, Foster said, every month the department puts out about 500 pages of data, about 2500 different items. He placed in the committee's record a press release of the same sort, issued and widely published last week.

Makes Long Statement

Mundt began yesterday's hearing with a long statement which Chairman Charles A. Wolverton (R., N. J.) said was more about foreign policy than it was about getting data from the Commerce Department.

Mundt told the committee he heard of 216 freight cars being sent to Russia, and of 100 locomotives being sent to Poland. Besides that, he added, we sent Russian five million barrels of fuel oil in 1945, half as much in 1946 and a billion barrels this year.

"And this," he said, "at a time when we face gas rationing in the United States."

(Meanwhile, Commerce Secretary Harriman was telling the House Banking Committee that we quit sending oil to Russia last July, when the Kremlin refused to say what oil Russia had on hand.)

Mundt said he definitely was not asking for an anti-Russian boycott—that he was in favor of sending the Russians and their satellites all the civilian goods they would take—but that he did not favor sending them anything that could be used for war.

After three hours of testimony, the committee adjourned without acting on the Mundt resolution.

Bidault Rushes Back to Paris

Lyon express train was derailed near Bourg-en-Bresse—the second such incident in that area in the last three days. Both the engineer and firemen leaped clear. The passengers escaped with slight injuries.

At Limoges a railroader flagged an express train just 100 yards short of a section of ripped up rails. Three rows of barges were stretched across the Seine and Oise rivers in a blockade attempt which failed when police reopened the waterways. Much coal is delivered to Paris by barge.

Police and motorized troops opened roads in northern France to struck coal mines. Fights erupted at Lievin when 700 miners tried, apparently without success, to return to work. Elsewhere few miners appeared to be trying to get back to the pits.

Reds Want De Gaulle In Office, Brewster Says

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Maine), who left Paris Saturday, said yesterday Communist strategy in France now calls for forcing General Charles de Gaulle into power as soon as possible.

This plan, which the Senator said he had from influential Frenchmen, is based on the assumption that the Communists cannot themselves take over until de Gaulle and his Rightist Rally of the French people have had their turn at the helm.

The Communists, the Senator said, are determined that the leader of the French liberation forces should be compelled to bring his avowed dictatorship to the country before next spring so that he can be tested and forced out during the hardships and disorders which will come with the winter.

Western Zones May Be United

Molotov again devoted most of today's two hour and 50 minute session to portraying Russia as the only defender of Germany against the "imperialistic" Western countries who want to turn the beaten nation into a helpless "colony," conference sources said.

Minor agreements were reached on peace treaty procedural matters without touching on fundamental issues. One agreement provides the Big Four Foreign Ministers will write the treaty itself, taking into consideration both the two-thirds votes and the majority voters of all the Allied nations attending the Peace Conference. A similar provision was used in preparing the treaties for Germany's satellites.

Failure of the four powers to agree thus far even on fundamentals appeared to lend added significance to a statement earlier today by Bidault. If this conference fails, he declared, France may merge her zone with the economically united American and British occupation areas.

At today's session the United States, Britain and Russia agreed a German government should sign a peace treaty, and France reserved her position on this question, briefing officials told newsmen.

A subsequent clause proposed by the United States touched off a new blast by Molotov against the Western countries.

U. S. Secretary of State George C. Marshall proposed that the German constitution contain a clause recognizing treaty obligations as the law of the land and that the German people ratify this along with the constitution.

House Delays May Tie Up Cargoes for France and Italy

tion for these relief supplies has been delayed. They will have to cancel their industrial imports altogether if Congress does not quickly carry the load of French dollar expenditures for food and fuel.

Officials here fear the result will be forced shutdowns of French factories later in the winter, with inevitable unemployment, for lack of the materials needed to keep them going. The Italians weeks ago had to abandon their purchases of comparable materials because of their shortage of dollars.

It was learned at the State Department yesterday that there are no further uncommitted funds for Italy in the 332-million-dollar post-UNRRA relief appropriation approved by Congress last spring. (France was not eligible for this post-UNRRA help.)

The only possible source of additional dollars for Italy, apart from a congressional authorization now, is about 20 million dollars still owed by the United States for the earnings of Italian prisoners of war in this country. But there is little prospect that the Army Department can finish its bookkeeping on this complex transaction in time to pay the dollars and bridge part of the gap caused by slow-motion on the interim-aid bill in the House.

If it were not for the help of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Italians would have to stop acquiring all food and fuel here. The CCC, however, has already bought most of Italy's 152,000 tons of grain for January, and is moving it as far as the seaports, despite the fact that Italy has no dollars to pay for it at the moment.

The present delay in the House threatens especially serious transportation difficulties if it continues beyond the end of this week.

Coal for December shipments has to start moving by December 10 if serious congestion of port and shipping facilities is to be averted. In December alone 67 coal cargoes are needed for Italy and 145 for France. The shipments, totalling 600,000 tons for Italy and 1,300,000 for France, have to be spaced to keep available colliers loaded and on their way.

150 Million Advance Hoped

One informed official estimated that there would be no dangerous interruption if both houses of Congress completed action on the bill this week. This assumes that the present bill will authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to advance up to 150 million dollars ahead of the actual appropriation, as the House Foreign Affairs Committee recommended yesterday.

The 150-million total is just about adequate to handle French and Italian needs until the end of this month. By that time, harassed officials here hope, the two Appropriation Committees will have held their hearings and Congress will have completed all the necessary action.

Peanut Controls Vote Set Dec. 9

By The Associated Press

Department of Agriculture officials said yesterday they look for no change in plans to conduct a referendum December 9 to determine whether peanut farmers favor a return to marketing quotas and acreage control to guarantee continuance of the Government's price-support program.

The imposition of controls would not be mandatory, even if farmers vote for them, but the department has warned that it will abolish the price-support program unless given authority to fix quotas and allot acreage. All controls were abandoned during the war.

Girl Hiccougher Operated On After Plane Dives Fail

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 1 (U.P.)—Surgeons hoped today a nerve operation would restore the "voice with a smile" of a pretty telephone operator who had been hiccoughing constantly for eight weeks.

Juanita McMichen, 19, underwent the operation yesterday in which the phrenic nerve, controlling her left diaphram, was crushed. The surgeon said the nerve would restore itself.

The girl hiccoughed several times after regaining consciousness but her physician believed she would stop.

One method for stopping hiccoughs, a steep dive in an airplane, failed Saturday when she was flown to 11,000 feet, from which repeated dives were made.

Va. Phone Rate Increase Data Given to SCC

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—A mass of requested statistical data was presented today to the State corporation commission to bolster a petition for rate increases filed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia.

Two witnesses testified when the hearing was resumed today after a recess since November 21. They were Harry C. Gretz, assistant comptroller for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and August P. Gompf, chief engineer of C. & P. of Virginia.

The information presented by Gretz and Gompf was requested by SCC counsel early in November.

Additional evidence is expected to be presented to the SCC tomorrow at 10 a. m. Among tomorrow's witnesses will be R. W. Mason, staff accountant for four C & P companies; R. W. Michie, a vice president of the same companies, and Gompf.

Mason will testify on the division of revenue between the Virginia company and its parent; Gompf will explain the company's construction program during the next five years and Michie will take up the intrastate toll messages and revenues among other things.

Generally, the increases asked by the telephone company would boost residential services charges by 25 cents per month, business charges by 50 cents per month and private branch exchange rates by higher amounts.

He'll Conduct Atomic Tests

U. S. Building Atoll A-Base

most of the Marshall Islands group, it is roughly halfway between Hawaii and the Philippines. About 5000 miles west of San Francisco, it lies 2700 miles from Honolulu and the same distance from Vladivostok, Russia's main Pacific port.

Lieut. Gen. John E. Hull, Army commander in the mid-Pacific, is coordinating Army, Navy and Air Force forces building the proving ground, it was said. The Atomic Energy Commission denied a report that he would head a joint task force conducting the tests there.

Whether the armed services would operate the test center for the AEC or whether the latter would have its own civilian director in charge is not decided, it was said.

Natives Pose Problem

An immediate job ahead of Hull is the relocation of the 147 natives of Eniwetok. One reason for the atoll's selection, it was stated, was its few inhabitants. They are not now living in their original homes, as they scattered to various islands surrounding the lagoon when the war started.

The Associated Press reported from Honolulu that the South Sea islanders will be relocated on Ujelang Atoll, 150 miles southwest of Eniwetok. This has been mentioned as a possible home for the unhappy 167 natives of Bikini, still on the unproductive island of Rongerik, because of the still dangerous radioactivity of their old home.

At Ujelang, the Navy will build houses, cisterns and other facilities for the transplanted islanders and, like the Bikinians, they will be special wards of the Government.

Unlike the Bikini tests, reporters are not expected to be present when there is test-firing of new atomic weapons at Eniwetok. The latter will be "under laboratory control condition with full security restrictions," it was said.

Wisconsin Girl Beheaded By Hitler, Magazine Says

Madison, Wis., Dec. 1 (AP).—A Wisconsin girl was beheaded on February 16, 1943, as a personal reprisal by Adolph Hitler, says the Wisconsin Alumni magazine.

The magazine said it obtained from records of the United States military government the story of Mildred Fish Harnack, a 1925 graduate of the university.

Mildred Fish, former Milwaukee and Madison resident, met Arvid Harnack, a German student attending the university in 1926 when she taught English there. They married and left for Germany in 1930. When Hitler came to power, Harnack joined the underground. He was caught and hanged on Christmas Eve, 1942. Mrs. Harnack, who had aided him, was given six months at hard labor.

After her trial, Hitler, going through the court records, came across the woman's dossier and ordered her trial reopened, as she was the only American then in his power. The sentence, at Hitler's command, was changed to the death penalty.

Jew Is Killed In Jerusalem

organization, said tonight Arab force was formed in Jaffe and "attempted penetrate" Tel Aviv's Shabazi quarter under cover of small arms fire and home-made bombs. The attack was accompanied by two diversionary thrusts—one in Mia Shearim st., the other in Shuk Hacarmel st.

Haganah sources in Tel Aviv said the Palestine government was "considering a plan" to withdraw all police and military forces from Tel Aviv, Ramat Gan and the Cetah Tiqvah area and handing over their duties to a Jewish command.

This move, the sources said, would constitute the legalization of Haganah security forces and would take place "in the next few days."

In the all-Arab town of Nablus, citizens and tribesmen from the mills gathered in the streets, shouted threats and fired off weapons.

The Arabs of Nablus were already on strike.

Arab informants said a huge demonstration would form inside the old city of Jerusalem at the outset of th strike tomorrow and they predicted "there may be trouble."

Demonstrations Continue

Demonstrations continued in Damascus, Syria, Alexandria and Cairo, Egypt, and in Beirut, Lebanon.

Reinforced security forces in Arab areas kept the demonstrators in check.

An oriental Jew was reported shot down by Arabs near Damascus gate in Jerusalem. The two Polish Christians were wounded at the same place a short time later, apparently by Arabs, police said.

Arab mobs which gathered at Jaffa gate to the old city stoned a Jewish bus and manhandled a number of Jewish pedestrians, police reported. Police scattered the mobs and put an end to the violence.

In Protective Custody

Amman, Trans-Jordan, Dec. 1 (AP).—Two American news correspondents, Phil Potter of the Baltimore Sun and Miss Charlotte Ebener of the Women's National News Agency, were held in protective custody tonight in the little Arab town of Zerqa, north of Amman, after being chased by an Arab mob earlier in the day.

Potter reported he and Miss Ebener were rescued from the mob by a British army major and were taken to the Trans-Jordan frontier force headquarters at Zerqa.

The mob which harassed the Americans also stormed the offices of the Trans-Arabian Pipe Line Co. here, threatened American personnel and burned office files and furniture, police said.

Even Arab Children Hate Now; Stone, Jeer Old Jewish Woman

Jerusalem, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—The old Jewish woman covered her face with a flabby arm and flailed away at her young tormentors with a twisted olive branch.

The Arab children danced around her, jeering, hissing, cursing. Some stood further back and flung stones.

Every day at noon this old woman had walked home past an Arab school without a curious head ever being turned in her direction. But today it was different. Today every Arab, even barefoot kids, hates every Jew, including old women.

Found by Scouting Party

A scouting party of 8-year-olds found her as she walked past the schoolyard. They taunted her, flung stones. She turned and returned their abuse, curse for curse.

This was fun and the youngsters called up reinforcements. Soon there were half a hundred circling her. A stone caught her between the shoulders, spinning her around. She picked up a branch and charged, protecting her face from the stones which now descended from all sides.

The youngsters skipped out of reach, chanting, laughing and teasing.

Egged on by Arab

An Arab laborer sauntered by, enjoying the sight, and laughingly spurred the children on.

An Arab auxiliary policeman, uniformed and carrying a rifle, dutifully ignored the affair.

Rescue finally came when a bespectacled British civilian ran across the street, shooed the kids away and piloted the woman into his taxi. The youngsters reluctantly retreated, rattling a last few stones off the back of the taxi.

Chest to Give Eighth Drive Report Today

With more than a million dollars still needed to meet the Community Chest Federation's 1940 campaign goal of $3,900,000, leaders and solicitors will meet today in the eighth report session of the drive.

Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., last night called for full attendance at the Dutch-treat luncheon set for 12:15 p. m. at Hotel Burlington.

"These last two weeks are the crucial ones," Foley declared. "We must all make a special effort to complete our progress reports before coming to these last four report meetings."

He expressed the hope that gifts totaling at least $295,700 will be reported at today's meeting. That sum, he said, represents the amount which must be recorded at each of the remaining four report sessions in order to attain the campaign goal.

Governme t Unit Chairman W. John Kenney, Undersecretary of the Navy, urged his campaign chairmen to check on progress of their volunteer workers in order to speed solicitations.

Speaking at today's meeting will be Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University.

Another report meeting is scheduled for Friday.

The drive, designed to raise funds for 125 Red Feath r agencies in the Greater Washington area, is scheduled to end December 12.

Local Police Must Guard Private Holly

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (AP).—State Forester H. C. Buckingham said today the Department of Forests and Parks had no authority to prosecute persons taking holly or other Christmas greens from private property.

The State law forbidding persons from taking holly, vines, flowers, shrubs or moss from private property must be enforced by local police, he said.

Community Chest Problem Created by Arlington's Growth

ing complete service to county residents. In the first place, the very nature of the county's phenomenal growth has made it impossible for the Chest agencies to calculate accurately the areas of greatest need.

Chest Supplements Taxes

And the Arlington Community Chest has to provide some community functions which in a well-established area would be performed by tax money. Recreation is a problem both to public and private officials in the county.

The Community Chest spends 45 per cent of its agency budget for recreation and character building in the county—and doesn't feel that its work in this respect is by any means complete. The Community Council has been asked to make a study of recreation facilities in the county to find out what areas are being served by existing agencies, and what part of the county is untouched by recreation facilities.

The Community Chest is operating a recreation center in the county. It actually is a demonstration program to see how much service such a center gives. When the demonstration period is passed, Arlington County officials, both public and private, must make up their minds whether such recreation should be tax-supported or the function of agencies such as the Community Chest supports.

Miss Leona Thietten, executive director of the Arlington County Chest, believes that what Arlington now has is the beginnings of a Community Chest program. All Chest officials can do is hold on to what they have, expand as much as their budget will permit, and wait for the county to "shake down" to its permanent size and character.

Aid to Welfare Department

The Chest does not have its own family and child welfare agencies; so it gives part of its agency budget—about 24 per cent, to the County Welfare Department, the Children's Home Society and and Catholic Charities. This money provides emergency help to persons or families in need who cannot qualify for assistance from tax funds because they lack the required length of residence in the county.

And there is the problem also of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association in the county. With salaries lower than those offered nurses in public departments in the area, in Arlington the association has had to depend on loyalty of its staff in order to furnish what can be a crucially important health service.

The Girl Scouts in Arlington have more than 2000 troop members—a third as many as Washington has—and they are having at least as much trouble as the Washington organization in keeping pace with the needs of their troop units.

There is one public tennis court in the county. There is no public golf links, no public swimming pool. The county YMCA program needs help. It is being run in an old residence at the present time while Y leaders try to raise funds for a modern structure. The Veterans YMCA for Negroes has met in 51 different places during the past year—it has no club rooms, no facilities or equipment to make its members feel they "belong" to an organization.

All these needs — and many more now unpredictable — must be met if Arlington's Community Chest is to do the job that Chest officials envision for it—a job of serving the whole community for the whole community's benefit.

What Worries America?

Inflation, the housing crisis, foreign relief, the atom bomb question—all these problems, and many more, claim the attention of every reader of THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

The two articles headlined on this page are typical of the alertness of THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE in presenting its readers with authoritative, timely articles on worrisome subjects that affect the daily lives and welfare of all Americans.

Anybody can make atom bombs. And there's no defense against them. Does this mean the inevitable death of every living thing in the world? No, says Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor of the University of Chicago—where the first atomic explosion was set off. If we can build a lasting peace, we face a life on earth far beyond the most fantastic dreams of man. Abundant cheap heat and power. Unlimited leisure. Cures for all diseases. A life as long as Methuselah's.

WHY YOU CAN'T GET THAT NEW HOME

NATHAN STRAUS, Former Administrator of the United States Housing Authority, places the blame for our continued housing crisis squarely on the shoulders of a powerful real estate lobby in Washington. In this revealing "behind the scenes" article, Mr. Straus denies that there is still a shortage of building materials. The real estate lobby, he claims, wields so much power that President Truman proposed recently that the "brazen" and "ruthless" group be investigated.

Speaking at today's meeting will be Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University.

Another report meeting is scheduled for Friday.

The drive, designed to raise funds for 125 Red Feather agencies in the Greater Washington area, is scheduled to end December 12.

Local Police Must Guard Private Holly

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (AP).—State Forester H. C. Buckingham said today the Department of Forests and Parks had no authority to prosecute persons taking holly or other Christmas greens from private property.

The State law forbidding persons from taking holly, vines, flowers, shrubs or moss from private property must be enforced by local police, he said.

Community Chest Problem Created by Arlington's Growth

ing complete service to county residents. In the first place, the very nature of the county's phenomenal growth has made it impossible for the Chest agencies to calculate accurately the areas of greatest need.

Chest Supplements Taxes

And the Arlington Community Chest has to provide some community functions which in a well-established area would be performed by tax money. Recreation is a problem both to public and private officials in the county.

The Community Chest spends 45 per cent of its agency budget for recreation and character building in the county—and doesn't feel that its work in this respect is by any means complete. The Community Council has been asked to make a study of recreation facilities in the county to find out what areas are being served by existing agencies, and what part of the county is untouched by recreation facilities.

The Community Chest is operating a recreation center in the county. It actually is a demonstration program to see how much service such a center gives. When the demonstration period is passed, Arlington County officials, both public and private, must make up their minds whether such recreation should be tax-supported or the function of agencies such as the Community Chest supports.

Miss Leona Thietten, executive director of the Arlington County Chest, believes that what Arlington now has is the beginnings of a Community Chest program. All Chest officials can do is hold on to what they have, expand as much as their budget will permit, and wait for the county to "shake down" to its permanent size and character.

Aid to Welfare Department

The Chest does not have its own family and child welfare agencies so it gives part of its agency budget—about 24 per cent, to the County Welfare Department, the Children's Home Society and and Catholic Charities. This money provides emergency help to persons or families in need who cannot qualify for assistance from tax funds because they lack the required length of residence in the county.

And there is the problem also of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association in the county. With salaries lower than those offered nurses in public departments in the area, in Arlington the association has had to depend on loyalty of its staff in order to furnish what can be a crucially important health service.

The Girl Scouts in Arlington have more than 2000 troop members—a third as many as Washington has—and they are having at least as much trouble as the Washington organization in keeping pace with the needs of their troop units.

There is one public tennis court in the county. There is no public golf links, no public swimming pool. The county YMCA program needs help. It is being run in an old residence at the present time while Y leaders try to raise funds for a modern structure. The Veterans YMCA for Negroes has met in 51 different places during the past year—it has no club rooms, no facilities or equipment to make its members feel they "belong" to an organization.

All these needs — and many more now unpredictable — must be met if Arlington's Community Chest is to do the job that Chest officials envision for it—a job of serving the whole community for the whole community's benefit.

What Worries America?

Inflation, the housing crisis, foreign relief, the atom bomb question—all these problems, and many more, claim the attention of every reader of THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

The two articles headlined on this page are typical of the alertness of THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE in presenting its readers with authoritative, timely articles on worrisome subjects that affect the daily lives and welfare of all Americans.

Anybody can make atom bombs. And there's no defense against them.

Does this mean the inevitable death of every living thing in the world? No, says Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor of the University of Chicago—where the first atomic explosion was set off.

If we can build a lasting peace, we face a life on earth far beyond the most fantastic dreams of man. Abundant cheap heat and power. Unlimited leisure. Cures for all diseases. A life as long as Methuselah's.

WHY YOU CAN'T GET THAT NEW HOME

NATHAN STRAUS, Former Administrator of the United States Housing Authority, places the blame for our continued housing crisis squarely on the shoulders of a powerful real estate lobby in Washington. In this revealing "behind the scenes" article, Mr. Straus denies that there is still a shortage of building materials. The real estate lobby, he claims, wields so much power that President Truman proposed recently that the "brazen" and "ruthless" group be investigated.

Fiscal Yardstick

One of the most constructive recommendations of the Auchincloss report on home rule for the District of Columbia, in our opinion, is that dealing with the so-called Federal contribution. The essence of the new plan is the separation of what is local from what is Federal. Every truly national interest in the Capital, the Auchincloss Subcommittee believes, should remain under Federal control and should be financed through the Federal budget. Governmental functions that are primarily local should become the responsibility of an elected city council. To make this separation financially feasible, however, it is obvious that some means of systematically dividing District expenses must be adopted.

The first fact to consider is that this division of governmental functions would not relieve Congress of all obligation to contribute to District revenue. With home rule effective, the Federal Government would still reap benefits from police and fire protection, from the construction of streets and sewers, from public health, welfare and recreational activities. Fairness demands that the Government, Washington's chief industry, contribute to the upkeep of these services just as big business must in every industrial city. We think that reasoning is unanswerable. The only real question is how the expenses may be divided so as to permit a home rule government to operate without a constant sense of frustration from not knowing what to expect from Congress.

The Auchincloss Subcommittee suggests that the Federal contribution be measured automatically each year by applying the tax rate of $2.00 per hundred dollars of assessed valuation to federally owned land and improvements in the District, excluding land in streets and alleys and under water. From this sum would be deducted the estimated value of all services furnished by Federal agencies to the District. And to it would be added the estimated cost of all services furnished by the District to the Federal Government over and above such services as are rendered to other taxpayers. This formula seems to us to be eminently fair to both the District and Congress. It i sa judicious adaptation of proposals that have heretofore won approval in the Senate. If Congress is to be relieved of the burden of legislating in detail for the Capital, it must certainly approve some means of automatically calculating from year to year what its contribution to the District will be. In all the years that this intricate problem has been discussed we can recall no formula more deserving of acceptance than that offered by the Auchincloss Subcommittee.

"Bryng Us In No Tripes"

Mr. T. C. Skeffington-Lodge complained rather bitterly to the House of Commons the other day about the quality of American-made magazine fiction that is now being bought by British editors for purveyance to their innocent readers. To judge from the titles quoted by Mr. Skeffington-Lodge—Kisses That Really Count, Pick Up Secrets, Love Is an Art, Date Tonight, and so on—he had in mind the sort of tripe that is rolled out for the American pulpwood trade, at two cents a word or thereabouts, by our industrious and energetic hacks. Evidently the American publishers have discovered a profitable secondary market for the stuff among the countrymen of Chaucer, Shakespeare and Milton.

Mr. Skeffington-Lodge, however, thought it would be no great hardship to the British public if they were deprived of this "Niagara of piffle and tush." What he seems to have contemplated was that the government should forbid further importation of American literary tripe on the pretext of augmenting dollar credits. Such an action has already been taken in the case of the Hollywood movies. However, the Financial Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. William Glenvil Hall, gently reminded Mr. Skeffington-Lodge that under article 9 of the loan agreement Great Britain is pledged not to discriminate against American products. Mr. Hall's point is that the restriction on the importation of Hollywood movies is merely part of a general restriction on all foreign movies. But since the United States is the only considerable foreign producer of literary tripe in a language which for the purposes of trade may be described as English, to prohibit it would certainly have an appearance of discrimination.

So that was that. Mr. Skeffington-Lodge explained that he wasn't being narrow-minded in the matter. He had nothing, he said, against the American way of life "as long as it remained in America." Mr. Skeffington-Lodge's conception of the American way of life, it appeared, was "a roaring carnival of quick drinks, adolescent sex, bright lights and dim thinking." Perhaps this conception is not as far from reality as we prefer to think; but the curious thing is that by no means all who find this way of life attractive are Americans. Doubtless that explains why British editors are buying rights to the contents of Passion Stories Monthly or True Romance Magazine instead of rights to the stuff in the Kenyon Review or the Hibbert Journal, which we feel sure they could have obtained on equally reasonable terms.

Successful Assembly

Few, if any, international gatherings have given vent to as much spleen, invective and demagoguery as did the session of the General Assembly which has just closed. It would be idle to pretend that the bitter denunciations and crude name-calling indulged in chiefly by the delegates of the Soviet Union and its satellites have not worsened international relations. Dr. Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, the skillful president of the Assembly, said that body had "laid bare the struggles, the divergencies, the misgivings, the rivalries that beset the world today." That is putting it very mildly. But in spite of all the rancor and petty bickering that came to the surface, we think the session made some notable contributions to the cause of world peace.

Most of the important resolutions adopted by this mobilizer of world opinion added to its prestige. The Assembly created a committee to watch developments in the Balkans, it set up an interim committee with power to bring the General Assembly into special session if the need arises, it appointed a commission to supervise elections in Korea, it instituted a study of the Security Council veto and it voted for the partition of Palestine. Most of these proposals were of American origin. Yet it cannot be said that the United States dictated to the Assembly in any single instance. Many of the proposals of our delegation were sharply modified before they were accepted. In spite of the unfortunate divergencies, and sometimes the lack of teamwork within the American delegation, it succeeded in giving leadership in the direction of peace and stability, and that leadership won overwhelming support among the other countries.

One reason for the success of the American program was undoubtedly the excesses to which the Russians carried their opposition. Nations on this side of the iron curtain saw in Mr. Vishinsky's tirades the embodiment of arbitrary conduct. His unfairness brought upon the Soviet Union a degree of isolation that would otherwise have been unthinkable. Behind everything that was done by the Assembly, moreover, loomed the Marshall Plan. Its influence became obvious from the ferocity of the Russian denunciation of it. The pity is that it was not more adequately explained and defended in this world forum. For it is the Marshall Plan more than anything else that has brought new hope and courage to the democratic world.

One other strong factor in the outcome was the hunger for peace that is sweeping the world. Most of the member nations saw in the creation of a "Little Assembly" and similar measures a groping on the part of the Assembly toward united action for peace. None of these measures is a guarantee against aggression. But the non-Communist nations went as far as they could go through the machinery of the U. N. in uniting their strength against potential aggression. The United States has every reason to be pleased with the success of its efforts in this direction, and because of the added responsibilities that success has brought, this country ought to face realistically the necessity of strengthening its U. N. delegation for the work ahead.

Canada's Price Control

In contrast to our policy of hastily shuffling off price controls at the end of the war Canada followed the policy of gradual decontrol of prices. By the middle of last September most of the wartime food controls had been lifted, and meat ceilings disappeared last October. As a result of a delaying policy which allowed time for building up productive output, Canadian wholesale prices advanced only 28 per cent between August, 1945, and September, 1947; whereas the United States wholesale price level rose 48 per cent during the same period. From 1937 to September of this year retail prices in Canada rose 52 per cent, while the United States consumers' price index in mid-September was 66 per cent above the level of August, 1939.

On the face of the record, the honors for efficiency in price control go to Canada. Her accomplishment is all the more praiseworthy, since the Canadians have had to import large quantities of raw materials and semiprocessed goods, the prices of which could not be controlled. However, Canada's price troubles are not yet over. For the import bans and quotas recently imposed on a wide variety of goods to reduce the drain on United States dollar has resulted in a consumer buying spree that has caused housewives to pay exorbitant prices for canned citrus fruits. Prices of home-grown vegetables, as well as imported produce, have also risen sharply. While the price impact on durable goods is said to be much less pronounced, many dealers report that their supplies of such articles are rapidly being exhausted—a situation likely to give rise to flourishing black or gray markets in scarce goods of this kind.

As a result, the government intends to reimpose price ceilings on the more important varieties of canned fruits and vegetables and may extend controls to fresh produce and canned fruit juices. The Finance Minister says there will be no general trend back to price controls. But he thinks it "would not be fair to either producer or consumer to permit unjustifiable price increases." In other words, since there is no shortage of essential foods, the Canadian government does not propose to tolerate excessive price increases in a few commodities, induced by panic buying and hoarding. Consequently, Canada is turning to a form of selective price control that is, in our opinion, fully warranted by the special circumstances of the case.

Her action is a very effective answer to the argument frequently heard in this country that it would be unfair to establish price ceilings for any one commodity or group of commodities and leave others free from controls. When the price of any essential commodity is boosted because of emergency relief buying or acute scarcities, it is not unfair, indeed it may become necessary, to protect the public from profiteering in that particular article through official intervention. Canada does not consider selective controls unworkable. Why should we?

Moral Rights

Nowhere in the world is there full realization of all the human "rights" enumerated in the declaration which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt (whose stature at the Assembly grows with every meeting) has proposed for adoption by the next session of the United Nations General Assembly. General recognition of these rights would produce Utopia. There could be no war, no oppression, no poverty, ignorance or fear in a world where individual dignity was actually considered inviolable and where governments were instituted only to advance human welfare. What Mrs. Roosevelt has proposed, then, is a set of ideals. The State Department has said of them that "even though all these rights are not immediately obtainable everywhere in the world, they are included on the theory that they are fundamental and should be the rights of every individual." It described Mrs. Roosevelt's proposal as "a statement of the aspirations of the peoples of the world for rights and freedom."

There is a good deal of semantic confusion about this term "rights." A citizen of the United States has a civil right, let us say, to trial by jury and to be confronted by the witnesses against him in all criminal prosecutions because the Constitution of the United States says so in terms binding upon all who administer justice in this land; and the force of government may be counted upon to protect this right of the individual. But when Mrs. Roosevelt proposes that the United Nations declare that "there shall be equal opportunity for all to participate in the economic and cultural life of the community," she is expressing, of course, an aspiration conspicuously honored here more in the breach than in the observance so far as Negro Americans are concerned and one that can be considered a right only in a moral sense since there is no effective means to enforce it.

Some of the "rights" proposed by Mrs. Roosevelt are, indeed, scarcely enforceable at all. "Everyone," says the declaration she has presented on behalf of her country, "has the right to a decent living; to work and advance his well-being; to health, education and social security." No one can doubt the desirability of this right; the realization of it is likely to be long in fulfillment. Other rights, taken for granted as fundamental to freedom in this land, are liable to be regarded as avenues to irresponsibility elsewhere. The Russians, for example, may not see eye to eye with us on the proposition that "everyone has the right to freedom of information, speech and expression." In point of fact there may be wide difference of opinion in respect of this proposition even here; Representatives Thomas and Rankin could scarcely be expected to agree to it.

Moral rights are worth expressing, even though the means are not available to guarantee them. Ultimately, indeed, it can be only through an acceptance of common values that the world will find enduring peace. Mrs. Roosevelt has expressed values which embrace the essence of civilization as we see it. No more fitting or eloquent voice could have been chosen to carry forward this moral purpose.

"Dewey's China"

In no phase of its editorial policy during the last two years has The Washington Post been more consistently sound than in its approach to, and treatment of, the China topic. In a long series of commentaries on this most maladroit area of our foreign affairs these editorials have evidenced a background of factual information and a freedom from cant in the best traditions of journalism. Especially is this true of "Dewey's China" printed in your issue of November 27th.

There is something a little ridiculous in Governor Dewey's dragging "aid to China" into his personal campaign. Dewey knows nothing first hand about China as would be evident to any old China hand reading his fulminations and, as The Washington Post rightly observes, the Chinese themselves—all except the official cabal grouped about the dictatorship of Chiang Kai-shek who profit by the continuance of "aid"—must resent the juggling around of 500 million Asiatics in the professional "sport" of North American politics.

"Operation Rathole" has served, is now serving, or could in the future possibly serve, no useful purpose either for the United States or for the people of China. There is no such mention as China except in a geographical and racial sense. The relatively very small portion of the enormous Chinese community misrepresented by corrupt officialdom has fattened on this "operation" long enough. We can't buy China with money nor do we fool China by a blind policy of continuing a unilateral objective dedicated, not for the benefit of the Chinese, but towards the antagonism of Russia. Dollar diplomacy failed in Latin America. It has no remote chance of succeeding in the Orient.

As your editorial so well expresses: "What our China aiders forget is that China is a unit only in its culture and its civilization," which, incidentally, is several thousand years older than our own. More strength to your editorial elbow.

GEORGE MARVIN,
Formerly of the United States Consular Service in China.

"Talk With A Communist"

Native and Continental Communists have not seldom taken note of Walter Lippmann as a publicist of wide knowledge and annoying political acumen. Pravda, Izvestia, and the pedestrian Daily Worker periodically salute his interpretations of American foreign policy vis a vis Moscow with an asperity which, in more tranquil times, might have contributed to the gaiety of nations. It is therefore surprising that your distinguished columnist records without qualification so curious a statement as that which appeared in his commentary in The Washington Post of November 25.

Under the caption, "A Talk With a Communist," Mr. Lippmann wrote: "My Communist—a very important one—had studied Karl Marx but had never heard much about John Maynard Keynes." This is strange in view of the very considerable attention which Stalinist theoretical literature continues to devote to the mind and personality of the late Lord Keynes. To keep abreast of this literature is well nigh mandatory among the higher echelons of the party. How else may one toe the ideological line? Besides, the Library of Congress discloses that the Russians have been at some pains to translate the major works of Keynes. Is it possible that Mr. Lippmann's Communist may have found it politic to disclaim intimate familiarity with so important a figure?

The intellectual custodians of the Kremlin's version of Marxism ponder the economic doctrines of Keynes with a deference and assiduity seldom accorded so staunch a luminary of capitalism. In the summer, 1933, number of the Yale Review he declared: "the class war will find me on the side of the educated bourgeoisie." This forthright statement seems not to have discouraged Surendra J. Patel from asserting in Science and Society, a quarterly dedicated to the more rarified exegesis of Marxism, "that it is possible for the Keynesians and the Marxians to approach each other on the basis of intellectual honesty."

The unique regard in which Keynes is held among the Stalinist hierarchy is again reflected in the autumn, 1946, quarter of the aforementioned journal. In language as respectful as it is extensive, it publishes a review of "Soviet Comment on Keynesian Theories of Full Employment." In the same issue Paul M. Sweezy can scarcely restrain his raptures over the seminal significance of Keynes' contributions to economic science. Among a plethora of other accolades he observes: " . . in Britain and the United States the Keynesians as a group are far better trained and equipped technically than Marxist economists." This is truly a concession; and how could such fulsome encomiums have eluded Mr. Lippmann's "very important Communist?"

JULIUS DAVIDSON.
Washington.

Adopted Village

My second and third grade class in Mount Rainier, Md., has adopted the French village of Bohars. Bohars, we learned, is about 5 miles from Brest, France. The village is very poor and was occupied all through the war by the Germans. It had much to suffer, and was practically destroyed when the Americans attacked.

The children are working very hard on their food drive; but they are few and Bohars need is great. They have been having so much fun working on this project that they wanted to share it. Therefore, I am writing in hope that you might help them find some "boys" who were in that area and might be able to tell them something about the village which they have adopted. Also they hope that some of those "boys" might have an extra nickel or two that they might send to feed to "Bo." "Bo" is a very large china pig bank which they are filling to buy the kinds of food which these people need most.

VIVIAN MARSHALL.

Royal Wedding

Your letters on the royal wedding have been amusing, but could you not in a footnote put misstatements of fact in proper light? I am thinking of Ada D. Butcher's claim (letter published November 26) that the Duke of Windsor was not invited because "he was married to an American woman . . . a slap in the face of every American."

According to the Church of England, "Wally" is a sinful woman and as the head of the Church of England, the King cannot invite her and still do his sworn constitutional duty. If it is a "slap" at anyone it is a slap at our divorcees.

MRS. A. R. TALBOTT
Bethesda.

Washington Teachers' Salaries

I should like to protest vigorously against an injustice recently done by your newspaper both to the public school teachers of the city and to the NEA research division. It would seem appropriate that a correction should be made in the interest of fair play and correct reporting.

You carried a news story to the general effect that the teachers of the District schools were "the highest paid in the United States." The impression was given that this statement was made by me in the research statement released from this office on November 21.

The statement released by us was an interpretation of the 1947-48 teacher shortage and other statistical estimates with respect to public elementary and secondary schools. My statement dealt entirely with the national picture within Continental United States and in the outlying areas (e. g., Hawaii and Alaska). Appended to the statement were statistical tables covering the 48 States, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Alaska, and the Virgin Islands.

On page 1 of the release, I placed a general warning against careless statistical comparisons. In spite of this warning various newspaper reporters compared the average salaries of the District of Columbia (an urban area) with a number of States (containing both rural and urban school systems). The conclusions drawn from such comparisons, of course, are erroneous and unfair.

When comparisons are made on specific items, such as salaries, the District of Columbia should be considered with the situations in large cities and not with averages in the States. When such comparisons are made for cities over 100,000 in population we find:

1. In total population the District of Columbia falls among the 10 largest metropolitan centers.

2. In March 1945, only two of 33 large cities had higher prices than the District of Columbia for equivalent consumer goods and services (according to the inter-city indexes of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics).

3. Among 84 of the largest cities the average salaries of all District classroom teachers ranked fourteenth in 1946-47 (NEA Research Division, biennial salary survey of city school systems).

4. Of the 84 large cities reporting 1947-48 salary schedules to the NEA Research Division in the fall of 1947: (a) The District ranked 13.5 on minimum salaries offered to beginning teachers with the A. B. degree and 15.5 on minimum salaries for beginning teachers with the M. A. degree;

(b) The District ranked twenty-eighth on maximum salaries for teachers with the A. B. degrees and 32d on maximum salaries for teachers with the M. A. degree;

(c) 26 of the 84 cities pay special maximum salaries for professional preparation above the M. A. degree. The District of Columbia is not among this group of 26 cities.

The organized teaching profession has deeply appreciated what newspapers have done in recent years in acquainting the public with the crisis conditions in the public schools. However, it is always a matter of great regret when statistical errors are made or when new and misleading interpretations are presented as though they are mere quotations from our statements.

FRANK W. HUBBARD,
Director, Research Division,
National Education Association
Washington.

Editor's Note: The figures to which Mr. Hubbard refers were presented in a mimeographed handout which listed District of Columbia statistics along with those of the States. The warning cited by Mr. Hubbard pointed out that the figures were tentative and preliminary, but did not caution against comparing the city of Washington with the States. A request for current figures on other cities has since been made of the NEA, but these figures are not yet available.

Steel Shortage

TUCSON, ARIZ.—The first fine flush of the boom is fading a little. That impression comes not so much from statistics, which still show phenomenally high production levels, as from the reaction of ordinary citizens.

Plane, train and hotel reservations are still hard to come by. But they are not as tight as they were a year ago or six months ago.

There appear to be definite limits on the expansion which came out of the vast wartime spending. The most obvious one is the high cost of living—now 66 per cent above August of 1939. A lot of households are being priced out of the market for everything but bare necessities, and even some necessities are so high up on the price shelf that low-income families cannot reach them.

There is another limit on prosperity not nearly so obvious as the H. C. of L. But related to it. That is the scarcity of basic materials essential to further expansion.

The No. 1 scarce material is steel. Take a simple illustration of how this scarcity works to put a brake on our economy.

Here's a Middle Western town of 5000 people phenomenally prosperous. Among the most prosperous merchants are those who sell appliances—the fine new radios, stoves and iceboxes that were unobtainable during the war.

The town gets natural gas from a pipe line that runs between the Oklahoma fields and Minneapolis. The amount of gas available in the town is strictly limited because the capacity of the pipe line is contracted for far into the future.

THIS MEANS that many householders who would like to buy gas stoves and gas furnaces, and can afford to buy them, are prevented from doing so. It means an arbitrary limit on sales of the appliance dealer. And back of him is the manufacturer who will be unable to sell the stoves he makes.

The solution is mainly to enlarge the pipe line, since natural gas is going to waste in the Texas-Oklahoma field. But that calls for steel, and all the steel that can presently be produced is bought far in advance by other users.

The appliance dealer also hears that rural electrification is being held up. Partly again, the reason is scarcity of materials. But partly, also, it is the opposition of the private utility companies to the work of the Government's Rural Electrification Administration.

Whatever the reasons, it is again a brake on expansion. Both profits and jobs will be restricted. And, as we learned in the depression that began in 1929, every man who loses his job makes it that much more difficult for the merchant to sell his goods off the shelves.

The steel scarcity touches directly, of course, America's capacity to carry through a European recovery program. The 16 European nations participating in the Marshall Plan listed their import needs of steel sheets and strip for 1948 as over 700,000 short tons. That is four times our recent rate of exports to those countries.

THE HARRIMAN REPORT on American resources touched on this basic shortage. The scheduled increase in steelmaking capacity, the report pointed out, will provide some additional supplies for both domestic use and export. But there is no assurance, it added, that United States output in the near future "will be adequate to meet all the demands upon it."

The Harriman committee felt that it was not its duty to say whether more steel capacity was needed. Construction of new steel plants would in itself require scarce steel and "would contribute very little to steel supplies in the next two years when European requirements are largest."

"On the other hand," the report states, "further expansion of steel capacity may be so important in the light of long-range considerations as to justify the use of scarce items for this purpose during the next two years."

This is cautious language. But it makes clear what the drafters of the report felt. Announcement by the big steel companies of new plant expansion would have the most far-reaching effect. It would be an announcement to the world that this country believed in continuing high prosperity.

Such an announcement should serve to shake down prices somewhat. By relieving present tensions it might bring on the "corrective recession" which many have believed necessary to prevent inflation and insure a continuance of high production and high consumption.

The steel companies can advance cogent and logical reasons why they cannot afford any further expansion. But those reasons should be weighed against the vital needs of a prosperous and stable world.

British Hockey Team

A small band of British women stepped off an Atlantic liner about six weeks ago to play field hockey in this country; and so far they have swept all before them, going from triumph to triumph. It is in line with the tradition of the United Kingdom and a slight restoration of prestige after the losses we have inflicted on them in recent years in every kind of contest, due supposedly, to the terrible devastations of war, to undernourishment and to conditions of austerity. It seems to recall the days a short while ago, when they, as a nation, and the RAF, saved civilization.

Their first match was versus the All-American team, when they won 2 to 0 at Garden City on October 19. Since then they have won all of 14 matches with a total score of about 150 goals to four against them.

The Decision On Palestine

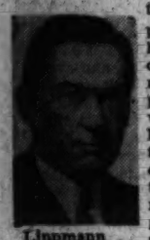
THE PARTITION of Palestine was as inevitable as was the partition of Ireland and of India, and for the same reasons. It is the way all empires end which have ruled over diverse communities. The imperial power, when it can no longer be maintained, becomes divided among those who remain on the ground and in actual possession of the various parts of the old empire.



Lippmann

This is what happened to the Turkish Empire. Its successors are the Balkan nations and the Arab states, all of which came into existence as a result of the partition of the Turkish Empire.

It happened also to the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Its successors are Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Yugoslavia; they are the heirs of the partition of the empire of the Hapsburgs. Long before that it happened to the Spanish Empire: our neighbors, the many Latin-American republics, are the heirs and successors of the Spanish Empire which was partitioned at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century, and our own Monroe Doctrine was a declaration against the attempt to reestablish the Spanish Empire.

THE VOTE in the General Assembly of the United Nations was in the last analysis a recognition of the fact that since Britain is no longer able to maintain an imperial peace in Palestine, the unified power which she has exercised must be divided among the communities which will remain after the British leave. The United Nations have had the wisdom not to attempt the impossible—namely to create an artificial substitute for the unified British imperial rule. They have accepted all the unavoidable risks which always and everywhere are present when communities, which have not been used to governing themselves, are cut loose and must then govern themselves.

One of the Arab leaders has pointed out that in the line-up of the nations on the partition of Palestine, all of the states of Asia were opposed or abstaining. That is true. But the array of the nations which voted for partition is perhaps more significant. The United Kingdom abstained. But the old dominions of the British Commonwealth of Nations voted for partition. So also did France, the Netherlands and Belgium—all of them western nations with imperial interests.

WHEN THE peoples of Asia study the decision, they will see that its greatest significance is that it recognizes the fact that the time has passed when the destiny of Asia can be determined paternally by the great powers, that the time has come when the dependent peoples of Asia must rule themselves—even though the price is the blood, the sweat, and the tears which all peoples have paid who have achieved freedom.

The agreement in the U. N., which represents a far greater unanimity than the numerical vote, could never have been reached if the proposal for Palestine had called for some sort of international government to replace the British rule. The agreement was possible because it does not require the international administration of Palestine, and all the confusion and contradictions which arise whenever the great powers attempt the impossible task of ruling jointly. The partition means that the great powers are withdrawing from the internal administration of the communities of Palestine, are leaving it to the middle sized and smaller nations to assist in the transfer of power to the Palestinian communities, and are, as great powers, limiting themselves to the prevention of international aggression across the new international frontiers of the Middle East.

THE DECISION in the U. N. is the first important agreement between the Soviet Union and the western powers—particularly the United States. It is interesting to note, and I think instructive, that it is an agreement to withdraw from the interior of a country.

Experience shows us that it just is not possible for the great powers to collaborate in governing other countries—be it Korea, Austria, or Germany. Their interests, their ideological differences, their traditions and temperaments, prevent them from working together on positive projects which call for teamwork and for close contact and daily give and take. We must not, I believe, expect collaboration of that kind and almost certainly it has been a costly business to make the experiment of trying to treat the whole complex turbulent world as one world which could be put in order by a series of unanimous agreements among the three or four great powers.

THE KIND of agreement that is possible—and may in the end be attainable—is agreement to withdraw from constant contact in all the hot spots of the globe. That is, I believe, the basic pattern on which peace, if it can be made at all, must in the end be made.

Those who take this view will say that a two-power world is intolerable, and that the other states and nations, now submerged beneath the Soviet-American conflict, must be called back to redress the balance which Russia and America alone can never hope to achieve. That, however much it may be misrepresented by its enemies and even by many of its ardent but uninformed supporters, was the original purpose of the Marshall Plan.

It is the only purpose for which it can conceivably be operated successfully.

Crisis At Hand

By Sumner Welles

Need For Unity In France, Italy

IN THIS period of mounting crisis the dictatorships can maneuver with greater speed and efficiency than the democracies. Moreover, as Mr. Walter Lippmann has pointed out, an unplanned economy is at a great disadvantage in waging a diplomatic war against a planned economy. Unless all of the democratic forces within the western countries are now willing temporarily to unite, these initial handicaps can prove fatal. For there is on longer any doubt that the dangers facing democracy are as great today as they were during the Second World War.

In neither France nor Italy have the democratic parties so far demonstrated that they appreciate this self-evident truth. Unless they do, they risk being crushed between the right and the left.

Mr. Zhdanov and his Cominform have proclaimed that the Soviet government will prevent the Marshall Plan from helping the peoples of western Europe. As the surest way of achieving that objective in France it is the Kremlin's purpose to push General de Gaulle into immediate control of the government and thereafter, by persistent strikes and sabotage, stop all production, with resultant economic and social chaos, and thereby goad De Gaulle into undertaking dictatorial measures which would antagonize a great majority of the French people and end in a popular swing towards communism.

NO FRENCH Prime Minister ever faced a bleaker outlook than Robert Schuman. His government must seek to curb an inflation already out of control, satisfy the legitimate complaints of the wage earners, cope with the revolutionary tactics of the Communists, and yet at the same time discourage the return to power of General de Gaulle.

There is a profund cleavage between the French Socialist Party and the other democratic parties on economic and financial policy. It is essentially the same cleavage as that to be found in England. Whether these liberal parties can work effectively together, notwithstanding their disagreement on internal policy, depends upon their willingness to subordinate these differences to the need of saving democratic government in France.

In Italy the appeal of rightist authorization is so far much less pronounced than in France. The effort of the Communists to portray De Gasperi as a new Mussolini is grotesque. But De Gasperi can only remain in power until the national elections next March if he is able to retain his majority in the National Assembly, to control inflation and raise living standards, and, what is perhaps today even more urgent, to defend his truly democratic government against an armed Communist uprising.

THE FIRST of these contingencies involves a purely internal Italian question. The answer to that question will be found in De Gasperi's ability to form a more broadly national government in which the non-Communist Socialists are represented. Both the Republican Party, headed by Picciardi, and the Socialist Workers Party, composed of those right-wing Socialists who rejected the leadership of the Communists' stooge, Nenni, eight months ago, are willing to join in such a coalition.

The leader of the Socialist Workers Party, Giuseppe Saragat, is one of the truest and ablest democrats to be found in western Europe. But here again the differences between the right-wing Socialists and the other democratic parties over the need for resort to a managed economy have long delayed the establishment of the kind of coalition that can best save the Italian people from a Communist dictatorship.

The other two uncertainties that enshroud the fate of the De Gasperi government must be resolved in Washington. Living standards will not be raised, and economic recovery will not be advanced, unless emergency relief as well as help under the Marshall Plan are made available promptly.

THE ABILITY of the present democratic government of Italy to maintain itself in the face of a Communist rebellion raises an even graver question.

As I wrote many months ago in this column, the Italian Communists are not only well organized and well financed, but they are well armed. They can instantly receive further arms and munitions from across the Yugoslav frontier. The Italian government is permitted by the present treaty to keep no more than 200,000 men under arms, including the 70,000 Carabinieri.

The American people surely recognize that the overthrow by an armed Communist minority of the democratic governments of western Europe would endanger the safety of the United States. Were this country to permit such an attempt to succeed the declared policy of the American Government would be doomed, and that is the only policy that can bring about a world order under which the American people could safely live.

Had the American Government been empowered and prepared in 1939 to announce that Axis aggression against the democracies would be regarded as aggression against the United States it is more than probable that the Second World War could have been averted. Were the Congress of the United States now to declare unequivocally by joint resolution that any Soviet-inspired attempt to overthrow by armed force the freely elected and constitutional governments of western Europe would be considered an attack against the United States, it is equally improbable that such an attempt would be made.

Argentina Replies to Post's Editorial on Export Prices

Buenos Aires, Dec. 1 (AP).—The government replied today to a Washington Post editorial of last Friday that took issue with a recent statement on prices from Miguel Miranda, chairman of Argentina's Economic Council.

The Government said The Post did not mention that the United States was charging "several times as much"—as what, the communique did not say—for meat sold to Britain.

Miranda had said Argentina would sell grain at world prices if she could buy needed machinery and petroleum products from U. S. export licenses had doubled factory prices for things Argentina buys.

(The Post editorial said the "'offer' of Argentina's economic czar to sell grain at 'world market prices' provided the United States will sell Argentina everything she needs at factory prices is an attempt to mix oil and water . . .

("North American foreign trade, unlike Argentina's, is not price-managed by the government. When Argentina offers wheat for export at twice United States prices, as it now is doing, the Argentina government is the agent and reaps the profit.

("Here, of course, there is a free market in foreign trade—aside from export restrictions—and the government has no say in the price."

(The Post said that "possibly" there was "some truth in Mr. Miranda's allegation that Argentina has had to pay up to 100 per cent above factory prices for what machinery she has been able to buy."

(The newspaper explained there was a "critical shortage" of many industrial items, that Argentina "in some instance, has bid up the price herself," that "middlemen and exporters are part of the normal channel of our export trade.")

The government communique said the Post "twistel" the role of Miranda in calling him an "economic czar." It added Miranda was "a collaborator in the government and nothing more," stressing that he carried out government plans.

The government declared nobody could expect to sell wheat at world prices and continue to pay two or more prices for the things she imports. It said Miranda's offer was "ample cooperation with the Marshall Plan." The offer, it went on, is only a request for equal treatment "with buyers in the United States who do not need export permits."

The government also said the United States could control export prices indirectly through the export license system, which fixes export quotas for each country.

Produce More, Spend Less, Taft's Cure for High Prices

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP).—An anti-inflation program calling on the American people to produce more and spend less was proposed tonight by Senator Taft (R., Ohio).

He denounced what he characterized as President Truman's request for "unlimited authority" to impose price-wage and rationing controls. Taft said the Administration was relying on a return to controls and this "at least raises the question whether it is in good faith in its denunciation of high prices."

Taft, who heads the Senate Republican Policy Committee and is an announced presidential candidate, told the St. Andrew's Society that "if we don't want high prices, we and our Government will have to spend less."

"We can't build new houses for everyone who wants them," he declared. "We can't export many billions more than we import. We can't spend too much borrowed money. If we don't want to sacrifice any of these pleasant and politically advantageous activities, then we had better face the fact that we will have high prices."

As his solution to the cost-of-living problem, Taft laid down the following proposals:

1. Conduct a campaign to increase productivity per man through improvement of machinery, methods and "better individual work by the men," conditioning any wage increase "on a more complete day's work."

2. Cut Government expenses and taxes.

3. Limit exports to countries outside western Europe to balance the imports from them and confine aid to foreign nations "to specific fields which we know can be effective."

4. Restrain the increase in bank credit.

5. Reduce the percentage of Government guarantee on housing loans.

6. Limit consumer credit.

Program to Affect Thinking

7. Carry on a campaign to discourage spending and encourage saving, particularly reducing the purchase of scarce foods "by those who can afford to waste less and eat less."

8. Carry out the congressional obligation to support farm prices "with discretion."

Although Taft presented the program as his own, his commanding Capitol Hill position indicates that it will be given heavy weight by his colleagues in any action they take in attempting to curb rising living costs.

The Ohioan complained that President Truman's anti-inflation program, which contained some of the remedies also suggested by Taft, didn't "seem to hit any vital spot" in the problem.

He said Administration officials were demanding indefinite power to impose controls of all kinds but avoiding the fundamental actions which might really reduce prices.

"Up to this time," he said, "the Government officials themselves have disagreed on nearly every important proposal. Is it possible that they would like to see the present condition continue until after the November election in order that there may not be the slightest chance of a falling off in the boom so favorable to anyone in power?"

He listed six factors he said were creating "unbalanced purchasing power," as follows:

1. Accumulated savings in cash, deposits and bonds, despite those being spent by many lower-income families.

2. A five-billion-dollar increase yearly in bank loans, which he said could not be stopped completely if production is to be increased.

Hits 90% Mortgage Guarantee

3. An increase in new home mortgages because of the Government's 90 per cent guarantee, a program which he said could not be abandoned but "could be placed on a sounder basis."

4. An increase in installment buying and other consumer credit amounting from one to two billion dollars a year.

5. Exports of 11 billion dollars "is clearly inflationary because it rises out of various kinds of foreign credit from the Bretton Woods Fund and Bank and from dollars accumulated abroad through lend-lease or war trading."

6. The "tremendous cost of government in this coutnry, with the corresponding burden of taxation . . ."

Taft said that President Truman "has fought bitterly every effort to cut any item of his budget, and now we read in the papers that next year's budget is to be 40 billion dollars, two or three billion dollars in excess of this year's budget."

Except for a savings campaign outlined by Treasury Secretary Snyder and a proposed limit on consumer credit, Taft said "the Administration has apparently no interest in the fundamental causes of the present situation."

"Congress will certainly consider their proposals to restore regulations on consumer credit and larger appropriations," he said.

"Congress will furthermore consider most seriously the question of power to fix margins on commodity exchanges, although the evidence to date shows that such margins have no long-term effect on commodity prices."

South to Be Dairy Rival, Md. Warned

The wartime development of synthetic nitrogen and the introduction of forage and pasture plants into the South may change it into a livestock growing area for the first time in its history, Agriculturist William B. Kemp said yesterday at College Park, Md.

Kemp, head of the University of Maryland Experiment Station, told a meeting of extension workers that Maryland dairy workers will have to increase efficiency to keep their markets.

Western condensed milk, butter and cheese will be looking for other markets here and in the Northeast when the South develops its own dairy industry, he explained.

The new outlets for Western milk will force competition with the Maryland milkshed, he said.

Another factor in the changing agriculture of the South is the decrease in cotton acreage due to recent high export prices and the expansion of synthetic fiber production, Kemp said.

He said the South is now using Bermuda grass, lespedezas and legumes for livestock feed and that a cheap commercial nitrogen fertilizer has been made available for forage production through the development of nitrogen explosives during the war.

Hagerstown Percheron Takes Chicago Show Championship

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Rem Degas, 6-year-old dapple grap Percheron, owned by Dr. Robert C. Snavely of Hagerstown, Md., today was adjudged grand champion stallion of the breed at the forty-eighth International Livestock Exposition.

The reserve grand championship went to Lynwood Brilliant, 18 months old, owned by Lynnwood Farm, Carmel, Ind.

Rem Degas handlers said the 210-pound stallion never had lost a contest in more than two years of competition in Maryland.

Grand Champion Wether

Meanwhile, Oklahoma A and M. College, Stillwater, won the award for grand champion wether with a 110-pound Shropshire.

The reserve champion, an 88-pound Southdown, was shown by Ohio State University, Columbus.

The grand champion pen of three lambs, Southdowns, was exhibited by Ohio State, with Iowa State College, Ames, taking the reserve championship, also with Southdowns.

Alex McKenzie, shepherd of the grand champion wether, listed in the official records as Oklahoma Ernie, said the lamb received no particular attention and was fed along with the rest of the flock.

12,500 farm animals competing in the livestock exposition began dwindling as 58 judges narrowed the field for the exposition's top awards.

Mass of Prize Stock

Class and breed champions in steers, horses, swine and sheep began emerging from one of the greatest masses of prize livestock ever assembled under one roof.

Farmland's wonders continued to lure city folk to eye the achievements of their country cousins. Exposition officials estimated more than 140,000 spectators had visited the show since it opened Saturday.

In addition to livestock winners selected today, judges of the hay and grain show, held in conjunction with the livestock exposition, awarded the title of soy bean king to H. L. Steigelmeier, 53-year-old grain grower of Normal, Ill., for the second successive year.

Winners from this area today included:

Polled Shorthorn, junior yearling bull, calved between January 1 and April 30, 1946—Cherry Hill Farm, Reisterstown, Md., first.

Railroads Boost Freight Hauled by Better Car Use

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Like a trick done with mirrors, the railroads have added the equivalent of 50,000 freight cars to their carrying capacity, entirely aside from any new equipment put on the tracks.

Fifty thousand freight cars would transport 2,840,000 tons of coal or 96,200,000 bushels of wheat.

No mirror was used in adding this capacity—amounting to about 3 per cent of the total—at a time when the carriers needed every possible car to meet the year's shipping demand.

It was simply the culmination of 25 years of effort by railroad managements, shippers' advisory boards and the car service division of the Association of American Railroads.

A few hours saved in switching operations, a few hours' less delay in loading or unloading cars, use of the most practical routing of cars to destinations—all these add up to reduce the elapsed time between loads.

"Turn-around time," the railroad term for this interval from the time a freight car is delivered for loading until it is ready for its next load, was reduced in the peak-loading month of October to a record low average of slightly less than 12½ days, compared with 13 days in the same month of 1946.

Nonpolitical Aid to Europe Urged by IBA

Hollywood, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP).—American aid to Europe under the Marshall Plan should be administered through a bipartisan corporation, the Investment Bankers Association of America proposed today through its president, Edward Hopkinson, jr., of Philadelphia.

Addressing the first plenary session of the association's thirty-sixth annual convention, Hopkinson said the question of American foreign relations in general and of American aid to Europe in particular were the most important matters before the meeting.

Asks Full-Time Directors

Remarking that "much depends upon the skill with which the American funds are administrated," Hopkinson continued:

"For this reason the aid extended under the Marshall Plan should be administered through a corporation with a board of directors of ful-time members who should have expert competence in the areas of activity in which the corporation will operate. Obviously, the members of such a board should be representative of both political parties, but should be chosen on the basis of merit and without primary emphasis on their political affiliations."

Turning to the Federal Government's civil monopoly complaint against the Investment Bankers Association and 17 of its members, Hopkinson asserted the Government's charges that the association is controlled by a group of banking firms were "utterly unfounded."

The Government in a complaint filed Oct. 30 in New York charged existence of a conspiracy in operation of the securities business.

Conspiracy Denied

"No 17 banking firms, whether composed of the firms named as defendants in the proceeding, or any other 17 firms, have dominated or controlled or attempted to dominate and control the policies and activities of your association," Hopkinson said. He added:

"Your association has never taken any position to prevent any company from selling its securities by competitive bids, or by any other method the company deemed desirable."

Self-Service Laundry Chain Is Planned

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Plans for a new Nation-wide system of self-service laundries were announced today by A. L. Hansen, president of Launder-Ease Sales Corp.

Hansen said the first unit will open in Flushing, N. Y., this month and the company plans to have 300 laundries in operation within the next 12 months. Each will be equipped with 24 Launderall automatic washing machines, 2 extractors and 2 gas dryers.

The initial investment for operators, he said, would range from $600 to $10,000 and the corporation will offer a package plan of service covering architectural, heating, plumbing, sanitation and management services.

Employes Now Control Milwaukee Journal

Milwaukee, Dec. 1 (AP).—Fifty-five per cent of the capital stock of the Journal Co. now is owned by employes, J. D. Ferguson, president and editor of the Journal, said today.

Some 66,000 shares valued at more than $5,300,00 now are held my 669 employes. The remaining 45 per cent is held by Harry J. Grant, chairman of the board, who inaugurated the plan 10 years ago; Miss Faye McBeath, a niece of Journal Founder Lucius Nieman, and by the family of Lloyd Tilghman Boyd, who was associated with Nieman.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Wheat slumped and food prices weakened irregular after a session of indecisive up and down movements on the Board of Trade today. At times corn displayed considerable strength, but midsession advances were mostly lost before the closing bell.

Wheat closed ½ to 4 lower, December 2.13½@2.13¾; corn was 1¾ lower to ½ higher, December 2.17@2.17½; oats were ⅛ lower to ½ higher, December 1.25, and soybeans were ½ to 3 lower, March 3.93.

Major cause for the lack of support in wheat was the lack of aggressive buying of cash grain by the Government. The Commodity Credit Corporation purchased only 100,000 bushels last week, all at Minneapolis. Traders said that from the actions of today's market, it did not appear that the Government agency was active.

Also unsettling to wheat was a request by Commerce Secretary Harriman, made before the House Banking Committee, that the Administration be given power to impose price control in some commodities. He did not state which commodities. With the CCC out of the cash market, the congressional debate over European aid and domestic price controls is causing a nervous market.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Cotton futures closed firm today at gains of 83 cents to $3.43 a bale. Prices moved over a wide range which some traders attributed partly to the higher margins on futures trading which became effective today.

The new crop deliveries moved into new seasonal high ground.

The offer of solicitor of the Department of Agriculture gave an opinion that the 92½ per cent of parity Government loan on cotton will apply to whole 1948 crop regardless of whether it is all harvested within the 1948 calendar year. Some quarters have felt that the current loan rate would expire on December 31, 1948.

Gen. Meyers' Bond Formula: Find a 'Cooperative' Banker

By J. A. Livingston

MAJ. GEN. BENNY MEYERS' exploits in the Government bond market have whetted appetites. America's sure-thing boys and girls would like to cut themselves in on a slice of easy pie. Runs the reasoning: If an Air Force general can do it, so can I. And so the mail brings in letters asking: How?

Livingston

Here's the answer: You find a nice, friendly banker who has (a) money he'd like to lend and (b) scruples he can put aside. Then, you pick the right time.

Benny Meyers picked the right time. He operated in Government bonds when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had to finance a war. Morgenthau needed a strong Government bond market. He wanted bond prices to go up and interest rates to go down. And with the help of the Federal Reserve System, Morgenthau got what he wanted. Every new Government bond was "priced" to go up. Result: An almost certain profit for speculators.

Here is what could have happened. An investor—say an Air Force General—borrows about $200,000 from a friend. He then goes to a banker and says, "I'd like to buy about four million dollars in Government bonds. I'll put up this $200,000; you lend me $3,800,000." So, the banker, for reasons of his own, agrees. Perhaps he fixes an interest rate of about 1 per cent. That's low. But in a money market such as prevailed during the war—with short-term bills returning the banks only .375 per cent—it wasn't bad.

THEREUPON, the banker sends the subscription for the bonds to the local Federal Reserve Bank. In so doing, the bank certifies that the purchaser is a bona fide investor. During the war, all banks and bankers were enlisted as agents of the Treasury. They were charged with the responsibility of seeing that persons, corporations and other institutions subscribing to Treasury bonds wanted them for long-term holding and not for speculation. They were also to see that subscriptions were in keeping with the financial standing of the buyer. To most banks, an Army officer who took on four millions of bonds would be buying over his head. But a few banks or bankers might have standards of their own!

Invariably, Treasury offerings were oversubscribed. It was the custom to allot to small investors—buyers of $1000, $10,000 and $25,000 worth of bonds, and sometimes more—their full quotas. Larger buyers—like insurance companies, banks, corporations—were usually cut down.

Invariably, the bonds sold above par. As soon as the terms of the offerings were announced, Government bond houses—like C. F. Childs & Co., First Boston Corp., C. J. Devine & Co., and others—made a market in them. The bonds might shoot up to a premium of as much as a half point in when-issued trading. So a quick speculator could make a turn by just getting an allotment.

GENERAL MEYERS apparently didn't make his money by a quick sellout. He held on for awhile. Suppose he bought four million dollars of 2½ per cent bonds; suppose he paid interest at the rate of 1 per cent a year on the borrowed money. Suppose he held the bonds for six months. Profit $30,000—1½ per cent interest for six months on four million dollars.

Now suppose also that the bonds advanced 2 per cent (two points). This was not unusual. So, he has a capital gain of $80,000. And the total profit would be $110,000, subject, of course, to taxes. The net would come to something less than $90,000. Not bad for six months of sitting.

Obviously for such a deal, you have to have connections. Also, you have to have a rising bond market. And that's not now. The Treasury isn't borrowing. It's permitting the bond market to go down. Two months ago Treasury 2½s of December 67-72 sold at 102⅞. They're now selling around 101. In April last year, they sold as high as 106½.

Thus, even Benny Meyers and his banker took a risk. It was slight. They were riding a trend, the Morgenthau-guaranteed bull market in governments. Yet slips happen. On September 15, 1931, Secretary Mellon put out a long-term 3 per cent issue. On September 21, Great Britain went off the gold standard. In six weeks the bonds dropped below 90, and later sold as low as 82. Any free riders then got taken for a ride.

Cincinnati, Dec. 1 (AP).—Powel Crosley, jr., president, reports that Crosley Motors, Inc., earned $309,563, after taxes, on sales of $5,485,884 in the three months ended October 31.

The earnings, he said, represented a net return of less than 6 cents on each sales dollar for the first 1947-48 fiscal quarter. During the same quarter a year ago the company reported a net loss of $363,613, while tooling up and moving into volume production in the fall of 1946.

Johnson on Stand In Stan. Gas Case

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP).—Christian A. Johnson, new board chairman of Standard Gas & Electric Co., today denied having any ambitions to head the 700 million dollar system when he began his campaign last year to get representation on the board.

Johnson, a New Yorker, stepped into the executive post vacated as the resignation of Leo T. Crowley became effective.

Crowley, however, remains as president until after the stockholders' annual meeting, which the Securities and Exchange Commission has postponed for 30 days from December 3.

As the SEC resumed its ninth day of probing the facts surrounding the shake-up of Standard Gas' board and selection of nominee directors for the election, Johnson was cross examined by Alfred Berman, company counsel.

Although George E. Allen, former Presidential adviser and a newcomer on the Standard Gas board, was scheduled to appear today, his examination was postponed because of his illness. He probably will be questioned tomorrow.

Capital Transit Deeply in Red For October

By S. Oliver Goodman

Capital Transit Co., hit by a four-month retroactive wage increase award, went $257,522 in the red during October and $11,793 in the red for the first 10 months this year.

In the monthly report filed with the Public Utilities Commission, the transit firm showed a 5.5 per cent increase in operating revenues for October despite a 7.8 per cent decline in revenue passengers. Operating expenses, including $595,180 back pay for the four months July to October, inclusive, leaped 35.8 per cent.

Provision for income taxes was slashed 98 per cent because of the large expense rise and provision for depreciation was reduced 13.9 per cent.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: R. A. Learnard has been appointed Washington district sales manager of Aluminum Co. of America, succeeding Arthur P. Hall who has been elevated to assistant director of public relations and advertising of Alcoa . . . Earle Gatchell, formerly an Army colonel, has joined Hayden, Stone & Co. as manager of the dealer and correspondent department in the New York office . . . Henry E. Perry, has been elected president of Commercial Solvents Corp., succeeding Maj. Theodore P. Walker, who was made chairman of the board.

ISSUE DEFERRED: Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday announced that its proposed offering of 85,000 shares of common stock had been deferred until the latter part of this month. Instead of December 3, "rights" to subscribe will be given to stockholders of record December 26. Otherwise the original plan remains unchanged. Subject to regulatory agencies' approval, the new stock will be offered at $20 a share to present stockholders on the basis of one new share for each five shares held. The warrants' new expiration date will be January 13.

ROLLS-ROYCES HERE: "Almost immediate delivery" is promised for the British-made Rolls-Royce and Bentley autos, which will be on exhibit tomorrow and Thursday at the Shoreham Hotel. Rolls-Royce prices, delivered in Washington, range from $18,800 to $19,500. Before the war, only 20 per cent of the Rolls-Royce cars built were exported. Now, by government regulation, three of every four cars built must be exported so that needed American dollars may flow into England.

STORE SALES: Department store sales throughout the Nation increased 9 per cent during the week ended November 22, compared with the corresponding week of last year. The Federal Reserve Board reported this yesterday and gave the following percentages of gain, by reserve districts: Boston, 9; New York, 5; Philadelphia, 20; Cleveland, 13; Richmond, 4; Atlanta, 6; Chicago, 10; St. Louis 11; Kansas City, 9; Dallas, 11, and San Francisco, 6.

SQUAWKS FEW: Contrary to popular belief, complaints about the higher commission rates in effect on the New York Stock Exchange since November 3 have been the exception rather than the rule. Reliable source indicates that the over-all revenue of member firms has increased about 7 per cent despite a dull market. Under the plan on the Big Board, the greatest volume of business is done in stocks selling at about $25 to $35 a share. Here the increase in rates is highest.

ODD LOTS: Washington and Silver Spring employes of House & Hermann Furniture Co. will receive a two weeks' pay bonus, Manager Thomas L. Hota announced yesterday. Those employed less than 12 months will receive one week's pay bonus . . . Special survey on 11 selected auto accessory company stocks is available at Washington branch office of Orvis Bros. & Co.

Desist Order Hits Airline After Crash

By the United Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday ordered Alaska Airlines, Inc., operators of a DC-4 plane which crashed Saturday with a loss of eight lives at the Seattle-Tacoma airport, to cease regular transport service.

Alaska Airlines is certified only to conduct chartered trips. The board said "informal investigation" established the airline was engaged in regular and scheduled service in violation of the Civil Aeronautics Act.

Brake Failure Blamed

Seattle, Dec. 1 (AP).—Hydraulic brakes that failed to hold after the landing were blamed today by Pilot James E. Farris, 37, of Seattle for the crash at the Seattle-Tacoma Airport which resulted in the death of eight persons.

Farris said water may have gotten into the hydraulic lines and frozen while the transport stood in the rain at Yakutat, Alaska, for 48 hours as 42 spark plugs were changed.

U. S. 'Fascists' Don't Warrant Investigation

By The Associated Press

Representative McDowell (R., Pa.) said yesterday he hasn't been able to find any fascism or Fascists in this country worth investigating.

As chairman of a House Un-American Activities Subcommittee on fascism, McDowell has been on the hunt for six months. But he told reporters he hasn't uncovered a single threat that would warrant a full-dress inquiry.

"We found evidence of a lot of intolerance in this country," he said. "There are Jew haters and those who don't like colored people. But there is no evidence of any organized, active fascism.

"To get somewhere, the Fascists would have to have an organization with money behind it, and they don't have it."

Communists have been the main target of the Un-American Activities Committee. But at one point McDowell invited the Communists to help him expose Fascists, since the Reds frequently raise cries of fascism.

McDowell said his subcommittee has investigated every lead it could get from any source. He said he thinks the subcommittee should keep on. But so far, he added, the checking has turned up nothing to indicate that fascism is any menace to America.

Fire Kills 6 Homeless Men In Dormitory

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP).—Six persons died today in a fire that raged through a dormitory for homeless men. Seventeen others were critically injured.

The flames, firemen said, started in an overstuffed chair. Water turned to ice as the fire fighters trained their hoses on the building. Despite their pleas not to jump, one man leaped from a third story window and was killed.

About 40, asleep when the fire was discovered at 12:40 a. m., escaped. Some fled down a stairway and over a fire escape. Some were rescued by firemen with ladders.

The whole interior of the North Philadelphia headquarters of the Volunteers of America, Inc. was wrecked. The flames destroyed furniture, clothing and hundreds of Christmas toys on which the men—some street corner Santa Clauses—had been at work.

Police listed the dead as Stanley Buseh, 45; Patrick Allen, 70; William Snead, 63; Michael Boyle, 59; Charles Kenney, 45, and Thomas Wallace, 50.

Damage was estimated at about $50,000.

Detroit, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—A wildcat strike by 21 welders today forced the Hudson Motor Car Co. to close its plants and lay off 12,000 employes.

A company spokesman said the welders struck without warning and demanded pay increases in violation of a wage agreement signed by Hudson and Local 154 of the Untied Auto Workers Union (CIO) last May.

Hudson currently is engaged in production of 1948 model cars. The company said the strike stopped production and made it necessary to close the car assembly line and most other departments at the main plant.

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 1 (U.P.).—National Guardsmen kept order today at lettuce sheds in Maricopa County where Gov. Sidney P. Osborn declared martial law to prevent renewed violence in a lettuce packers strike.

Thompson Suggests Joint Pro Football Draft

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE FIRST BREAK in the National Football League's solid front against the upstart All-America Conference occurred yesterday when Alexis Thompson, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, spoke out. Thompson said he favored a common draft of college talent by the NFL and the Conference, thereby publicly recognizing the existence of the new league.

POVICH

With that statement, Thompson is the first owner to dismount from the NFL's high horse. For three years, the NFL people have been maintaining the expensive fiction there is no other major football league than the NFL. They may view Thompson's action as treason, but his kind of treason threatens to become popular with the other owners in the league before long.

It was apparent many months ago that as soon as the National Football League owners began to feel the economic pinch they'd lose some of their smugness and do business with the new league. Thompson himself has not been greatly affected by the competition—he has no rival league in Philadelphia—but he has already discerned the economic suicide of the NFL attempting to go its separate way.

IT'S BEEN A good year for the Eagles. They have won the Eastern Division championship, and gate receipts are way up, but the Eagles won't declare any big dividends. They can't. It cost 'em too much to operate the team. Thompson says that his payroll for the year topped $280,000, in contrast to the prewar seasons when he could field a team for around $80,000.

The competition between the two leagues has bid up the players' salaries to a point where many a lineman is now drawing $10,000 for the season. The pay checks of the star backs are, of course, bigger. Graduating college stars have been enabled to sell their services to the highest bidder among the two leagues. When the NFL was the only circuit doing business, the owner could name the salary figure—or else.

Thompson probably isn't the only one among the NFL owners who'd like to extend the olive branch to the All-America. Boston, Detroit and the Chicago Cardinals are reported to be operating in the red. The New York Giants have taken a fearful rap, financially, from the AAC team in New York. Indulging their smugness as the holier-than-thou league of pro football is getting expensive for the NFL people.

AS EXPECTED, Thompson's peace offering drew from NFL Commissioner Bert Bell the well-worn echo "No comment." There wasn't a whole lot Bell could say, anyway, for a guy in his position. He'd probably get his official neck wrung by the die-hards among the NFL owners who have been pretending that the Monday morning papers make no mention of any but NFL games.

For two weeks in a row, now, the New York Giants have been outdrawn in their own bailiwick by the Yankees of the AAC. On a day when the Giants drew 39,000 with the Packers, the Yankees across the river were drawing 70,000 to their game with Cleveland. Last Sunday, with the sensational Chicago Cardinals as an attraction, the Giants drew fewer fans than the Yankees again.

Up in Boston Sunday, the Yanks could only draw 24,800 against the Redskins, and that represented Boston's top crowd of the season. A club can't hope to avert a big financial loss for the year unless it draws at least 30,000 per game, and the Yanks doubtless would welcome a kiss-and-make-up agreement with the AAC that would bring the payroll down.

THE NEW YORK GIANTS own the draft rights to George Connor, Notre Dame's All-America tackle of the last two years, but it could be a meaningless privilege. Before the AAC was in operation, Connor was compelled to sign with the NFL or stay out of pro football. In these times, he can thumb his nose at the NFL and accept a better offer from the Conference team that claims him, if the offer is forthcoming.

Peace between the two leagues wouldn't be a good break for the graduating college stars. An agreement between the leagues to respect each other's draft rights would reduce the players to the same sort of peonage they encountered when the NFL was the only league in the field. That phase of any agreement would benefit only the league owners.

Thus far the NFL has shouldered the added costs of its war with the AAC without outspoken complaint. They've taken their losses well, I must say. After all, it's only money. But that could change a few minds.

Griff Denies Yank Offer, Wants to Rebuild Nats

Clark Griffith "wants to start over again" in rebuilding the Nats.

The owner of the Nats made this disclosure last night when asked about a report out of the Miami, Fla., winter baseball meeting that the New York Yankees are seeking Pitcher Walter Masterson or Early Wynn.

"The Yankees haven't made me any bids," Griffith said.

Sure he would deal with the Yankees, "if I can get what I want."

Wants Young Players

Griffith wants "young players, infielders and outfielders."

"I want to start over again," he said. "I don't want to trade players like Masterson, Wynn, Mickey Vernon or Stan Spence, if I can avoil doing so. I want to keep them to build around with youngsters."

Griffith then dropped in a punch line:

"We've been working on some things. You'll find out what they are by the time the major league meeting in New York this month is over."

AP Reports Trade Brewing

The Associated Press reported out of Miami that the biggest deal being talked around baseball lobbies has either Masterson or Wynn going to the Yankees in a major swap still in the tentative stage.

Manager Bucky Harris of the world champions would admit nothing in Miami beyond a statement that a deal for a pitcher quite likely would be made.

If such a transaction is completed the Yanks plan to hold up the announcement for the major league meetings next week at New York. (That tied in significantly with Griffith's comment here.)

Last March the Yanks were hot for a deal with Washington for First Baseman Mickey Vernon. Although they reportedly offered Catcher Aaron Robinson, Outfielder Johnny Lindell and others at the time, Griffith turned them down cold.

The Yankees weren't the only club trying to stir up business in Miami. Although this is a minor league convention, it is largely a meeting of the majors and their farm connections. Even more important than technical changes in the intricate baseball law, is the desire of each club to improve its roster for next season.

Bill Veeck, president of the Cleveland Indians, blew into Miami and went into a huddle with Bill Dewitt, head of the St. Louis Browns, who said yesterday he would deal Outfielder Jeff Heath and all men over 28, except Pitcher Nelson Potter.

Veeck Doesn't Bite

Veeck came out of the short conference without biting at the Browns bait. He already had acquired Pitcher Bob Muncrief and Wally Judnich from the St. Louis club two weeks ago.

Lou Boudreau, recently signed to a two-year contract to manage the Indians, confirmed reports that the Tribe was looking for an outfielder but said nothing was "on the fire."

The Detroit Tigers were on the prowl for infield talent, needing a second base and shortstop combination if they again are to become a pennant factor.

Recent activity by the Boston Red Sox who acquired Shortstop Vern Stephens and Pitchers Jack Kramer and Ellis Kinder from the Browns for about $345,000 and 10 players has made all American League clubs realize they must strengthen, with Joe McCarthy back at the helm, the consensus around these meetings is that the Sox are the team to beat in 1948.

"Gator Bowl, Here We Come," Shout the Terps

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

The Maryland football squad yesterday unanimously voted to accept an invitation to play the University of Georgia in Jacksonville's 'Gator Bowl January 1. This was the happy scene in the Terp locker room at College Park yesterday after it was formally announced that Maryland and Georgia had been matched for the third annual game. The fellow on the right with the loud checkered cap is Lu (Bambino) Gambino, Maryland's high-scoring halfback. The Terrapins resume practice Wednesday and will enplane for Jacksonville December 26

NFL Owner Makes First Overture to All-America

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The first small crack in the dike that separates the National Football League from the All-American Conference became visible today when Alexis Thompson, wealthy young owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, said he favored a common draft of college talent.

Thompson, a guest at a meeting of the New York Football Writers Association, put the question to Lowell (Red) Dason, coach of the Buffalo Bills, who replied that he favored such a move. Thompson then answered his own question affirmatively.

Bert Bell, commissioner of the National League of which the Eagles are a member, and John V. Mara, president of the New York Giants, had "no comment" although Mara was seated near Thompson.

Jonas H. Ingram, commissioner of the All-America, said later he long had favored such a move.

Pro Salaries Up 100 Per Cent

Under a common draft a college player would be permitted to dicker with only one club, as is done in baseball. Since the All-America was organized two years ago the college players have been drafted by a club in the National League and by one in the new circuit.

The competitive bidding has hiked the present average pro salary from 80 to 100 per cent above that of prewar days when only one league existed, one football official estimated.

He pointed to the bidding between the New York Yankees of the A-A and the Chicago Cardinals of the NFL, for the services last winter of Charles Trippi, Georgia star.

Trippi finally signed a contract with the Cards. It reportedly paid him $100,000 for three years and granted him permission to sell his baseball abilities elsewhere.

Hasn't Felt Out Others

Thompson admitted he had no idea how many of the remaining National League club owners thought as he did and added he was not even certain that the suggestion would be placed before the National League meeting later this month.

Ingram previously had sponsored such a suggestion. Today he repeated it after hearing of Thompson's approval and said he also favored exhibition games between the two leagues and a championship game at the end of the season involving the two pennant winners.

Just a Money Saving Scheme, Says Marshall

In Washington, Owner George P. Marshall of the Redskins had the following to say on the joint National and A. A. Conference draft favored by Thompson:

"Looks like somebody is trying to save some money. I am not interested in saving money. My main concern is making the Redskins a championship contender in 1948."

Marshall would not say he was against a common draft, sidestepping the issue with:

"When Arch Ward started the All-America Conference he stated publicly it was for the purpose of helping players better for their services. I don't see how the AA can help players if it enters a common draft agreement. The whole purpose of the Conference would be defeated."

Chandler Returns Check, Dumps Priddy Deal Back in Griff's Lap

Commissioner Holds Trade In Abeyance Until Peace Talks

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats' on-again-off-again deal for Johnny Berardino of the Browns took a new turn yesterday when Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler temporarily washed his hands of the dispute and dumped Clark Griffith's problem back in Clark Griffith's lap.

Chandler returned to Griffith the check the Washington club had sent to the Browns in payment for Berardino and ruled the deal had not been "consummated" as far as his office was concerned. But Chandler did not declare the deal void.

Chandler's action merely held the deal in abeyance until Griffith makes his peace with General Manager William DeWitt of the Browns or, failing that, asks the commissioner's office to make a final decisive ruling voiding it.

Meanwhile, the status of Berardino and Gerry Priddy of the Nats, who figured in the projected transfer, remained vague following Berardino's announcement he was quitting baseball.

Up to DeWitt

"If DeWitt doesn't call off the deal, I'll ask Chandler to call it off," said Griffith. "Berardino announced publicly that he was quitting the game, and the Browns tried to trade me a ballplayer who was already out of baseball, whether they knew it or not."

The Nats' owner revealed that Vice President Cal Griffith, who entrained last night for Miami to represent the club at the minor league meeting, would confer with DeWitt there and attemp to "get this thing straightened out."

"I don't want the deal to go through now," said Griffith. "They can't expect me to wait on Berardino's change of heart. This is the season when I have to make solid plans for 1948, and they have my hands tied. I don't know whether I have a second baseman or not."

Johnny Falters

Griffith disclosed that he had heard from Berardino by telegram, and that the second baseman had retreated from his outright statement that he had quit baseball for a seven-year contract with a movie studio.

"Berardino told me in his wire to take it up with his movie employers," said Griffith. "He said he wasn't positive what his baseball future would be. I say 'To heck with that,' I'm not doing business with movie people. Chandler has to make a ruling on this in my favor, if DeWitt doesn't call the deal off."

Griffith reaffirmed his intention to trade Priddy, even if the Barardino deal is called off. "He doesn't figure in my 1948 plans, and we can use him as trading material. That's why I want a ruling from Chandler before the big league trading sessions start in New York on December 8."

Arkansas Will Meet W&M in Dixie Bowl

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 1 (AP). The Arkansas Razorbacks, in a surprise announcement, were named today to oppose William and Mary in the inaugural Dixie Bowl football game here January 1.

William and Mary, with nine wins and one defeat, won the Southern Conference title this year. Arkansas won five, lost four and tied one.

Cooper Wins Thriller by TKO in 4th

Nineteen-year-old Jimmy Cooper, the closest approach to perpetual motion to grace a Washington ring in years, scored a sensatoinal fourth-round technical knockout over 20-year-old Uuggy King in the feature attraction at Turner's Arena last night.

Although the bout lasted only half of its scheduled distance, oldtimers who witnessed the sizzler proclaimed it one of the most thrilling ever staged here.

The end came after 2 minutes of furious scuffling in the fourth and after King had gone down for the counts of 8, 3 and 4 earlier in the round.

In the opening four, Julian Keene outpointed Joe Moseley. Lucky Stephens decisioned Angelo Marinia in the second four and Roscoe Mercer won a four-round decision over Bobby Suma.

In the semi-windup scheduled for five, Kid Alexander stopped Lee Herald, after two minutes of the second round.

Rube Is Southern's Coach of Year

Durham, N. C., Dec. 1 (AP).—R. N. (Rube) McCray of William and Mary was honored as coach of the year in the Southern Conference and Charlie Justice of North Carolina was lauded as the most valuable player of the past season in the conference at a testimonial dinner held in their honor by the Durham Quarterback Club here tonight.

McCray and Justice were chosen for the honors by a vote of the 16 leading coaches in the conference. It will be an annual affair conducted among the coaches by the Quarterback Club and the Durham Morning Herald.

Lujack Receives Heisman Trophy

Johnny Lujack, field general of Notre Dame's all-conquering football team, yesterday added the Heisman Memorial Trophy to his long list of honors for gridiron prowess.

The 22-year-old quarterback from Connellsville, Pa., received a total of 742 points in New York City's Downtown A. C.'s annual poll of sportswriters and broadcasters to determine the Nation's outstanding college football player.

Michigan's Bob Chappuis, who collected 555 points, was second. Doak Walker of Southern Methodist was third with 196, followed by Charley Conerly of Mississippi.

Colorado Becomes Big Six Member

Kansas City, Dec. 1 (AP).—The University of Colorado officially became a member of the Big Six Conference today, marking the first expansion of the league since it began operations in 1928.

The seven-team circuit will continue to be known as the Big Six until someone comes up with a name that proves popular over the area.

Roller Skating Stars Arrive for Tourney

Internationally famed stars who are to represent the United States and Great Britain in the 1947 world roller skating championships at the new National Arena, 17th st. and Kalorama rd., on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week came to town yesterday.

Joan Atkinson, Georgina Byrne, Kenneth Byrnes, Jean Phethean, G. Donald Stirling and G. Stirling are the British entries who put in an early appearance. Charlotte Ludwig, Violet Gargano and Jude Cull, all from New Jersey, also arrived.

Card Owners Angling for Browns' Park

St. Louis, Dec. 1 (AP).—Ancient Sportsman's Park, which would be a major stumbling block in any transfer of the St. Louis Browns to another city, could be sold to the Cardinals "at the right price," one of the new Cardinal owners said today.

Fred M. Saigh, jr., who became the principal minority stockholder of the Cardinals in the sale of the club last Tuesday, said the Cardinals would be interested in buying the Browns-owned park if it could be purchased for about $700,000.

If such a transaction meant the Browns were moving from St. Louis—leaving the field here clear for the Redbirds—"it would be worth it to us to pay a higher price," Saigh added.

He added, however, that there had been no negotiations toward such a deal between the two St. Louis baseball clubs.

Giving impetus to speculation the Browns might be moved to another city if the club is sold, Saigh disclosed that Robert Rodenberg is coming to St. Louis Wednesday to sound out the Cardinal stockholder on the attitude of the new Cardinal owners toward buying the park.

Rodenberg, president of the All-America Football Conference Baltimore Colts, has expressed interest in buying the Browns and transferring the franchise to the Maryland city.

Since 1920 the Cardinals have played home games at Sportsman's Park. Their present lease, under which the Cardinals pay $35,000 a year in rent, has three years to run, with a 10-year renewal option.

Stags Sell Halbert To Philadelphia

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Chicago Stags of the Basketball Association of America announced today the sale of Center Charles Halbert to the Philadelphia Warriors for $7500, which the club said is one of the highest prices ever paid for a basketball player.

Tom King, publicity director for the Stags, said the sale was a straight cash transaction and that Halbert will report to the Warriors immediately.

Sailors to Providence

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors of the Basketball Association of America announced today that Kenny Sailors, recently purchased from the Chicago Stags, had been sold to the Providence Streamrollers.

Leo In or Out? 'Son, Not Now,' Says Rickey

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THE MAN SAID Branch Rickey was rue in at National Airport at 6:30 last night and suggested it would be a good idea that I be there just in case the director of the Flatbush Follies had something to say about the Leo Durocher-Burt Shotton managerial stew.

I met Mr. Rickey; we had a long heart-to-heart talk—about four minutes, to be exact.

"Guess you're about ready to announce that Durocher will be back as Brooklyn manager next year?" I asked as a warmup question.

"Airplanes give me an earache," the Brooklyn Deacon replied. "They don't bother some people, but others suffer everything under the sun, don't you agree?"

I ssaid I did, but didn't allow his conversational detour to stymie me.

* * * *

"HAVE YOU CLEARED everything with Commissioner Chandler preparatory to announcing Durocher's return?" I tried again.

"Son," he said in a fatherly tone, "I'd prefer you wouldn't bring that up. I'm not quite ready to say anything just now. It's a little breezy out tonight, isn't it?"

Once more I agreed, but at the same time was determined to get a little baseball talk into our chit-chat.

"When Durocher comes back, what will happen to Shotton? Will be still be with the organization?"

"What did you say your name was?" he asked very politely. I told him, and he answered:

"Son, I'd prefer you wouldn't bring up the Durocher-Shotton matter. Yes, I've spoken to Chandler, just recently, and I'll probably have something to say about our manager in a few days. But please, son, not now."

Well, I couldn't get mad with the fatherly Mr. Rickey. Hadn't he taken me into his confidence by telling me how he felt about air travel and the weather? And hadn't he called me 'son'? But this final fiuestion just slipped out:

"What about all this talk about wholesale changes to be made on the 1948 Brooklyn team? Do you think Durocher will be satisfied with the club Shotten left him"

"There you go again, son. I can't answer that because I can't answer that. I won't make a trade until I've talked with our manager. And I'm not going to tell you who that is now."

Can you imagine that? He didn't even call me "son" as he bade me goodnight.

Skins Will End Guessing Game Over Draft Choice This Week

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

A guessing game which has kept some Washington Redskin fans excited while their heroes were leaving them cold will end this week when the local National Football League team announces the name of its "bonus choice" in the player draft.

Redskin sources say the player, now being sounded out, is "the No. 1 player in the country," meaning of course the No. 1 unsigned player.

"Our choice may not sign this week," it was said, "but we should know whether he is willing to play with us. In that case we can make his name public."

Every indication pointed to the selection of a backfield man, particularly one of the "scatback" variety whose running could add deception to Sammy Baugh's passes. The field was considerably limited by the number of stars—like Chappuis, Lujack, Conerly and Rossi—who already belong to one or another pro team.

Washington's first selection might easily be one of five players. At the top would be Pennsylvania's Tony Minisi and following are Texas' Layne, Columbia's Gene Rossides, Yale's Ferd Nadherney and Southern California's Bob Doll.

AS THE REDSKINS prepare for Sunday's clash with the Giants in New York, their next to the last game of their worst season in history, they must admit the affair lacks something. Always before it was of vital interest in the NFL race; now its a rat race between the fourth and fifth place teams in the East.

MEANWHILE THE Redskins, who have a very good passer and some very good receivers, have those same items to blame for their latest licking, that 27-24 business Sunday in Boston. Boley Dancewicz was the hurler and Don Currivan, Harold Crisler and Joe Golding did the catching . . . If Washington had connected on all its scoring changes, however, it would have won by something like 58-27 . . . While Baugh was adding to his records for passes thrown and completed, Bob Nussbaumer was breaking the Redskin mark for passes caught, set by Steve Pagarus in 1945 . . . Michigan Bob caught eight tosses, bringing his total to 41 catches as four touchdowns and leaving him little more than a stiff elbow.

---

NOTE TO RADIO FAN: Baugh's "longest run" Sunday, at the start of the second quarter, was good for a minus nine yards. Sammy advanced the ball 14 yards, losing his right sleeve as he was caught trying to pass, but the play was called back because the whistle blew behind the line of scrimmage. Sam had a longer run on the last play of the game, good for about 43 yards back and forth before he was downed five yards back.

---

CONFUSION DEPARTMENT The last two minutes of the Yanks-Redskin first half rates high. Within that space the following happened (with a few lapses which only the officials can fill in): Dick Todd intercepted a pass on the Redskin 13, there was a Redskin penalty for delay, Jack Jenkins fumbled, Micka recovered and lateralled to Currivan, the play was called back, the Yankee's Seno fumbled, Maznicki kicked a field goal, Scollard kicked off to Nussbaumer, the Yankee Band was chased off the field, and Scollard kicked off to Turley. Whew—you take it from there.

High Schools and Chest Fund Split $14,321 From Title Game

AN AUDIT of attendance figures disclosed yesterday that 16,547 persons paid $18,403.60 to see the Central-McKinley interhigh championship game at Griffith Stadium last Friday night.

The game was played under the auspices of the Board of Education and The Washington Post.

After deduction of taxes and expenses, the athletic funds of the eight interhighs and the Community Chest will share $14,321.24.

School officials were enthusiastic in their praise of the manner in which the game was conducted.

"Among the many fine features of the contest that pleased us was the interest shown by the students," John Paul Collins, principal of Eastern and a member of the Board of Education's game committee, said.

Attendance of students was by far the greatest in the history of scholastic athletics in Washington. Approximately 10,000 school boys and girls saw the game and they conducted themselves exceptionally well.

The game itself was so impressively played that many spectators yesterday were comparing it with first-rate college football.

6000 Attend Opening Dayat Charles Town

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 1.—Horse racing, a sport here since revolutionary days but legalized with betting only since 1933, returned to the Shenandoah Valley this afternoon. Conditions were ideal with a fast track and bright skies. A crowd of 6000 witnessed a good brand of competition.

The day's feature, the Inaugural purse, brought together three arch rivals and they held the money places after a dash of 6½ furlongs.

G. Y. Bookers' Lawless Miss proved the best of the lot, getting home 2 lengths in advance of J. E. Crider's Comedy Player. A half length farther back came H. N. Warren's Annie's Dream to be third.

Winner Pays $5.20

A second choice to Annie's Dream in the betting, Lawless Miss returned a $5.20 win mutuel and she was clocked in 1:19, only three fifths of a second over the track record for 6½ furlongs held by Misty Lady.

Annie's Dream did the expected by getting to the front. She saved ground while shaking off Aylesbury but her lead was not long-lived. Jockey E. Carrillo soon moved Lawless Miss to the outside and she went up head and head with her rival.

Entering the stretch, Lawless Miss rallied to take command as Annie's Dream tired. Then Comedy Player, lacking early speed, responded to pressure and closed with a bold rush to close in on Lawless Miss and crowd Annie's Dream out the place award.

Fifth Victory of Year

Lawless Miss' victory was her fifth of the year in 18 tries and brought her 1947 earnings to $7350.

The fifth race, The Zeno Purse, and the day's secondary feature, went to Alma Stevens' Flying Raid, the daughter of Sky Raider turning back the estate of P. H. Faulconers' Roman Boy, now an 11-year-old.

The 3-year-old filly finished a length and a half in front. Third money went to J. K. Kynkoop's Louray O'Neil, a favorite who had a rough early trip.

Flying Raid returned $12.20, was clocked in 48 2-5 for the about 4½ furlongs and was well handled by Jockey Jimmy Baird.

The Daily Double on the 2-and-4 combination padi $18.80. Johnny Tammar won the first with Fast Talk at $4 and Patsy Grant annexed the second with Homeward Bound at $7.60.

Gulfstream Suspends In Dispute Over Purses

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP).—Gulfstream Park will close after today's eight-card winter horse race inauguration because of a deadlock between track officials and horsemen over bigger purses, President James Donn declared.

Donn said the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association (HBPA) had rejected a compromise proposal he submitted and "Gulfstream Park has no recourse except to close its doors."

The horsemen issued a lengthy statement which said there was "a long history of unsatisfactory relations" between the association and Gulfstream Park's management.

They demanded that minimum purses be increased from $2000 to $2500 and that $22,000 be paid daily in purses exclusive of stake races.

Donn, in his counter-proposal, suggested that minimum purses of $2000 be offered during the first 10 days, $2200 for the next 10 days and $2300 purses for the final 20 days.

The official, who took Gulfstream out of bankruptcy and operated it as the third horse track in the Miami area, said the horsemen had turned down his counter-proposal.

Donn said:

"Barring any last minute settlement, and I can't see any in view, the track will close tomorrow and will remain closed until we can come to terms."

Alex C. Dumestre of New Orleans, president of HBPA, said after a three-hour meeting with Donn:

"As far as we are concerned, there has been no official compromise proposal made to us. There is no compromise."

Dick West Gets Poe Cup

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP).—Princeton University, confronted with a choice between between the two members of what Charlie Caldwell called "one of the greatest defensive combinations in modern Princeton football history," split its highest grid honor—the Poe Cup—between Quarterback Dick West of Washington, D. C., and Center Francis J. Perantoni of Raritan, at its annual football dinner tonight.

Both West, who attended Episcopal High of Alexandria, and Perantoni will be graduated next June as former captains of the Nassau grid squad, West holding that post this past season and Perantoni having served as captain in 1946.

West, 24-year-old honor student and Army veteran, called signals and played defensive halfback. He saw sufficient action to credit him with an average of 59 minutes per game. He led the Tigers on the offensive with a net gain of 847 yards and in forward passing with 28 completions out of 57 attempts.

The Poe Cup was established in 1916 in memory of John Prentiss Poe, a Princeton football star who was killed in World War I. The award is decided on the basis of both ability and qualities of personal character.

His 96 Points Are Tops

Gambino, South's Point King, Is 'Cindrella Man' of Season

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—The Cinderella fellow of the Southern Conference for the 1947 football campaign undoubtedly would be Lucien (Lu) Gambino, the University of Maryland's sophomore halfback from Baltimore, Md.

During the 1946 season when T-Master Clark Shaughnessy guided the Terps, Gambino was just another football player who spent most of his time on the bench and saw little action.

When Jim Tatum left the University of Oklahoma to take over the coaching chores at Maryland last spring, the new Terp mentor immediately singled out Gambino as a player with potentialities for becoming a great halfback.

To start the season off in September, Lu was not a regular, but he soon earned a starting berth in the Maryland backfield.

Today his accomplishments were these—

1. He had been named to the 1947 All-Southern Conference eleven.

2. He ha dbeen voted by the league's 16 coaches as the second "most valuable" player in the loop—only a vote behind North Carolina's great tailback, Charlie (Choo-Choo) Justice.

3. Gambino had sewed up the Southern Conference individual point-making race with 96 points, 24 more than Justice tallied to take similar honors a year ago.

Behind Gambino in the individual scoring parade was Jack (Flying) Cloud of Norfolk, Va., William and Mary's sophomore fullback, likewise, an All-Southern selection. Cloud made 90 points.

Terps, Bullis Are Honored

Touchdown Club members saluted two Washington area teams who have received football Bowl bids at yesterday's weekly luncheon.

Bill Meek, assistant to Coach Jim Tatum at the University of Maryland, was there to tell about Maryland's bid to the 'Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla. The Terps meet the University of Georgia on January 1.

Bullis School also received congratulations for the invitation accepted by its undefeated, united club to meet Merianapolis Academy in the Shoe Bowl Game, involving the Eastern Preparatory School title, at Lynn, Mass., on December 14.

Possibility of Navy Playing Missouri At Stadium Fades

A possibility of Navy playing Missouri at Griffith Stadium next football season apparently faded out yesterday.

Naval Academy officials said they were "tentatively considering" playing the Missouri game here October 16, 1948, "depending on the availability of Griffith Stadium."

"But we have just about decided to play the game in Baltimore (Municipal Stadium), because this date was included in our original contract with the park commission there," they added.

At Griffith Stadium, it was said that the ball park will not be available to Navy next October 16, because "other teams have booked that date."

Cain Will Speak

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) will be guest speaker at the Falls Church Lions Club banquet honoring the Falls Church High School football team and its coaches Thursday evening.

Out Hunting

By Jack Bell

AS A RESULT OF the last war the condition of the nation's natural resources including fish and wildlife, excites at this moment an interest which is by no means confined to our Federal and State conservation agencies.

Great exertions are now being made by the Department of the Interior and four government agencies interested in improving and preserving the forests, soil and waters, to increase production of lumber, farm products and fisheries.

Yesterday a representative cross section of the Nation including governmental and private conservation agencies, writers for the outdoor magazines and a handful of outdoor newswriters met in the Department of the Interior.

The meeting was called at 9:30 a. m. by J. A. Krug, Secretary of the Interior, who in opening, stated the meeting was to be the first of its kind called by a Secretary of the Interior. He then turned the meeting over to Newton B. Drury, director, National Park Service.

Drury, in his report on the National Parks, stated that since the end of the war there has been an increase of 17 per cent in park attendance and the increase is continuing. October showed a 26 per cent increase.

* * * *

THE PARK SERVICE, charged with protecting, preserving and maintaining the "peoples estate" has been under fire for many years and has been accused of being a "land grabber." Its lands comprise 71 hundreths of 1 per cent of the Nations total acreage, a very small area to be sure! At present, however, there is no planned legislative program with regard to a balanced, long-range, integrated and wisely related program. Mr. Drury's remarks excited a lively discussion regarding the designs of special interests to make inroads upon the natural resources of the National Parks.

TOM WALLACE, President of IWL, stated that while 54 billion feet of lumber a year is consumed, we continue to plant and grow only 45 billion.

Now that economic pressure is becoming greater, these same special interests now want to raid the peoples' estate (The National Parks).

Secretary Krug, in closing yesterday's session said, "so long as I am Secretary of the Interior there will be no changes in park boundaries."

The meeting and discussions are to be concluded today.

relieve conditions of "intolerable hunger and cold and prevent serious economic retrogression."

Three other amendments by Kem were adopted without much debate. These would permit American press and radio representatives to "observe" the working of the program in France, Italy and Austria, and require detailed reports on the amount of commodities distributed, the number of individual recipients, and other details.

Another amendment, by Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) carried a flat prohibition against presidential proclamation of price control or allocation measures in connection with the program. This was adopted, viva voce.

Wider Aid Voted Down

Shouted down was an amendment by Senator Taylor to make the full amount of interim aid available through the United Nations to all hungry peoples, instead of exclusively to France, Italy and Austria. Vandenberg, in his shortest speech of the day, said it would destroy the "entire structure" of the program.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) voted for the Taylor amendment but unlike Taylor voted for the bill. Pepper objected that the measure "by-passes U. N." but said he is for it and will support the long-range program because of Europe's dire need. In a speech, he warned against collaboration with "fascist" regimes abroad. He said Congress must be ready to follow up any aid granted with the domestic controls needed to support it.

To Clear Next Week

House Foreign Affairs Committee action followed a morning conference with the House Republican Steering Committee. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R., Mass.) said the aid legislation will finally clear Congress next week.

House Rules Chairman Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.) predicted his group will vote a green light for the measure, probably tomorrow.

Allen said he will vote for House right of way "but will vote against this interim aid bill as well as the Marshall Plan which will cost the American taxpayers more than 20 billions of dollars, which is more than $300 for every American worker."

The House Foreign Affairs group finally hit on the 590 million dollars relief total after rejecting a whole series of other proposed ceilings, ranging from way below to above the Administration's own.

The committee restored in three chunks 41 million dollars of the 108 million dollars it chopped from western Europe relief last week. First 37 million dollars was added to make up part of Italy's wheat deficit. Then another one million dollars was voted to provide Italy with more edible oils. Finally a group of members, seeking "fairer" treatment for France, succeeded in writing in another three million on the plea that they wanted a "round number" total.

No Fixed Amounts

The committee's bill, however, will not specify a fixed amount for any of the three western European countries. Even the proposed 60 million dollars for China will be mentioned only in the committee's formal report. The Senate made no similar provision for China. Secretary of State Marshall had urged that China all estimates, to be submitted later, be considered separately by Congress.

Other provisions of the House measure paralleled, with only minor variations, limitations and conditions previously approved by the Senate.

Like the Senate, the House group wrote in a "no guarantee" savings clause, which said in effect that the United States is under no obligation to deliver. Both bills provide that aid could be terminated in cases of breached agreement, or if need for aid ceased.

Both bills also provided that up to 25 per cent of the relief may be purchased outside the United States, with this variation. If above that amount could be purchased elsewhere at delivery prices below those prevailing here, the limitation wouldn't hold.

Full Publicity Demanded

The House measure, as well as the Senate's, provided for negotiation of agreements with recipient countries to require full publicity of relief distribution, payment for goods into a local currency trust fund to provide more relief, sale of relief items at "reasonable prices," a ban on export of relief items, and measures by recipient countries to increase their production.

Among House departures from the Senate measure were provisions for shipment of "incetnive goods" to increase production abroad, FBI clearance of United States employes distributing relief, and a requirement that a National Food Conservation Committee be continued in this country on a voluntary basis.

Nor was the provision for a 140-million-dollar RFC "advance," to start the relief program rolling while Congress is debating the actual appropriations, in the Senate bill. This is expected to be accepted in conference by Senate managers.

Although studded with amendments, the bill passed by the Senate yesterday contains no major conflict with Administration policy. The only Senate attempt to cut the bill (to 400 million dollars) was turned back last week by a 56-to-30 vote.

No division of countries is written into the bill, but Vandenberg told the Senate food, fuel, fertilizer, pesticides and medicine would be distributed as follows: France 328 million dollars; Italy, 227 million, and Austria 42 million.

Under the Senate bill, the program would be administered through relief machinery set up by the State Department to handle Europe's last 332-million-dollar grant. The House bill provides for transfer of the program to a new administrative agency, when and if one is set up by Congress.

Vandenberg, Barkley Thanked by President

President Truman yesterday called Senators Vandenberg and Barkley by telephone and congratulated them after Senate passage of the European aid bill. He said he was gratified by the tremendous majority—83 to 6—by which the legislation went through the Upper House.

Mr. Truman learned of the Senate's action through Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Minority Policy Committee, who called White House Secretary Matthew J. Connelly.

'Investigation' Arrests Hit

tice, Auchincloss said, is merely indicative of "bad police work."

With home rule for the District, Representative Auchincloss said, the situation could be easily straightened out "because the citizens wouldn't stand for it."

Senator John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.), former county and Federal judge, declared:

"Anyone who has any concern at all for civil liberties cannot justify the police practice on the grounds of expediency. History shows such grants of power have been abused."

As to legislation, the Kentuckian said he was opposed to broadening police powers by law. He added that the fact the arrest-for-investigation practice was followed in other cities, didn't justify it here.

Edward J. Flynn, managing director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, commented that while his organization could not condone any illegal activities of the police, "we do recognize that the expedient problem of solving crime must allow the enforcement officers a reasonable amount of discretion." He added:

"It is our belief that a limitation of the power—the power to arrest for investigation—should be written into legislation."

The legislation, he said, should provide specific safeguards for the arrested person, such as limiting the length of time he can be detained by police before being either formally charged or released.

Practice Held Necessary

"If the practice of holding suspects for questioning, identification, and a check of possible evidence is necessary for adequate functioning of the police department—and we believe that it is—the police should be given legal authority for the procedure," Flynn said.

"In no instance should the individual be held unless there is a strong reason to believe that he is involved in a particular criminal situation."

The local bar association civil rights subcommittee has undertaken a study of the practice of arresting persons on the charge of "investigation" on the basis of the facts uncovered by The Washington Post in its examination of police station books October 1 through November 10.

Royall Will Not Run For Governor in N. C.

Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall said yesterday he cannot "retire from my present position in time to become a candidate for governor" of North Carolina.

Royall said in a memorandum to the press that he had written this information last week to friends who have urged his candidacy.

He said he came to his conclusion after considering his responsibilities as Secretary of the Army "and the present and future tasks which have been assigned to me and accepted by me in connection with the national military establishment."

Three Reported To Have Rejected Public Housing Post

GOSSIP: Three people are reported to have turned down the job as commissioner of Public Housing Authority. They are:

Mark Grosman, a Cleveland lawyer who was that city's first chairman of its housing authority; Charles Kaufman, a Norfolk attorney, and chairman of that city's housing authority, and John Bobbs of Boston, of former regional director of National Housing who resigned recently to enter the building business.

Several other people who have been approached have shown no interest in the job. Most of them say they can't afford to accept the Federal post. Furthermore, whoever takes the job is sure to be investigated and assailed in Congress another deterrent in getting an able successor to Dillon Myer.

Meantime, it's reported that Interior Secretary Krug is anxious to persuade Myer to take a position in his department, either as director of the Bureau of Land Management or as commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

POST OFFICE: Top-ranking Democratic politicians tried their best to stop the appointment of career-man Jesse Donaldson as Postmaster General. Their No. 1 choice was Joseph Nunan, a New York attorney, who resigned recently as commissioner of Internal Revenue. The No. 2 choice was former Senator James Mead. But the Donaldson appointment has proved to be one of the most popular ever made by the President. Insiders say the one Democratic bigwig who went to bat for Donaldson was Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, who once served in the department with him.

Postal workers and their organizations have gone all-out for Donaldson who knows their problems first-hand. The new Postmaster General, who was once a $50-a-month substitute letter carrier, has received pledges of support from thousand of rank-and-file postal employes.

PS: It's a good bet that Donaldson will support the powerful move to get a pay raise for postal workers. The AFL letter carriers will meet here January 12 to spark the drive.

LOYALTY: The 20-man Civil Service loyalty review board will meet tomorrow and Thursday to discuss the all-important rules and regulations to cover loyalty investigations and cases .It can also be expected to make public the Attorney General's list of organizations he believes are "subversive." The list is ready but it hasn't been formally turned over to the review board.

In its rules and regulations, the board can be expected to reject a plea that an accused employe be given the privilage to face and cross-examine his accuser. They will also seek uniform treatment of all employes, whether they be veterans or nonveterans. And the board is sure to insist that all agencies follow their decisions.

NOTES: Senator Buck (R., Del.), whose Senate subcommittee soon will launch an investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation attended an RFC meeting last week. . . . Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) will autograph copies of his amusing book, "Laughing With Congress," this afternoon at Woodward & Lothrop's book shop. . . . Samuel M. Gold has resigned as chief counsel of the Indian Claims Commission to resume law practice here and in New York.

The District Federation of Federal Employes Unions will have a Christmas dinner and party tomorrow night at the YWCA. . . . Civil Service's efficiency rating conference will open today in the Interior auditorium. . . . Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) will head up a Commerce subcommittee to study the creation of a proposed department of transportation. The new agency would include all Government bureaus in the transportation field.

CIVIL SERVICE has announced an exam for highway engineer and highway bridge engineer with salaries ranging from $3397 to $4902. The jobs are open in the Public Roads Administration here and in nearby States.

Meantime, Civil Service has requested Federal agencies to supply it with the names of all war-service and temporary people in engineer field jobs that pay from $3397 to $3975. It has a number of laid-off career engineers who will be certified to some of these positions.

MARITIME: The President yesterday urged Congress to extend immediately the authority of the Maritime Commission to operate, sell, and charter Government-owned ships. The agency's power to operate ships will expire on February 28.

About 2500 maritime jobs are involved in the request. If the Congress ignores the President—which is most unlikely—all of these 2500 jobs would have to be abolished by that date. However, the Congress may not ask on his request during this special session as he suggested.

XMAS JOBS: The City Post Office and post offices in nearby States will hire upward of 4000 part-time and temporary workers to help out with the annual Christmas rush. The hiring has started already and it will be speeded up within two weeks.

No full-time Federal worker in another agency can be hired for this work. The jobs pay $1.04 an hour for day work, plus 10 per cent additional for night duty. Veterans will be given preference. The jobs are open to men only. Apply for jobs in Washington at the City Post Office next to the Union Station.

Butter Price Nears Dollar Pound Here, Highest in 3 Months

Increases Follow Rise in New York; Steady Hikes Seen

Retail prices approaching $1 a pound for top-grade butter will be in effect at most stores here starting today or tomorrow, dairy officials said yesterday.

Price of Grade A—92 score—butter, which comprises the bulk of sales, will be about 94 or 95 cents a pound, dairymen said.

The increases follow continued price boosts on the New York wholesale buttter exchange, which yesterday sent the price of AA grade, 93 score, up another cent and a half, to 87 cents.

Highest Since Mid-September

Grade A butter was 84½ cents on the New York wholesale market yesterday.

The local retail prices will be the highest here since mid-September, and may later rise to a record high, according to dairy spokesmen.

Industry officials said an 87-cent wholesale price in New York means about 90 or 91 cents wholesale here because of wrapping and packing, and up to about 99 cents retail.

Increases Cent a Day

George Fletcher of National City Dairy Co. said local butter prices have been increasing "almost a cent a day for the past week, and will probably keep on rising as December is the month of shortest butter supply."

N. Coppola of Grande Valley Products Co. said he doubted that most retail stores would charge more than 99 cents for even the top AA grade. "Hardly anybody wants to charge prices like that," he said, "for they know of the buyer's resistance that will set in."

Moving Day

2500 Pupils Transferred In District

The Washington Post
MARSHA ALDRICH, 10, of 1422 18th st. nw., a fifth grade pupil who moved into Eastern High School today, gets a thrill out of having a locker all her own. Her elementary school was not so equipped.

It was moving day yesterday for nearly 2500 District school students as the transfer of five white schools for use by Negroes and the closing of three other school buildings became effective.

Approximately a thousand Negro students from overgrowded Browne Junior High School, 24th and Benning rd. ne., moved into the Blow and Webb Schools vacated by white elementary students.

Use of these two schools placed 1223 Browne students who had been attending classes part-time on fulltime programs.

1500 White Transferred

In addition about 1500 white children, including 227 from Blow, and 249 from Webb, 15th and Rosedale sts. ne., are transferred.

Five hundred and sixty-eight elementary students were moved into 11 classrooms in Eastern High School, 17th and East Capitol sts., and four elementary classes for 103 students were set up in Jefferson Junior High, 8th and H sts. sw.

In other changes: 221 students moved out of the S. J. Bowen Elementary School, 3d and K sts. sw., into either Jefferson Junior High School, Amidon Elementary School, 6th and F sts., sw., or Greenleaf Elementary School, 4th and M sts. sw.

One hundred and fifty-six students from the Hayes Elementary School, 5th and K sts. ne., were transferred to Blair Elementary, 6th and I sts. ne.; Ludlow, 6th and G sts. ne., Madison, 10th and G sts. ne., or Wheatley, Montello ave. and Neal st. ne.

64 Move From Lenox

Sixty-four students transferred from the Lenox Occupational School, 5th and G sts. se., to Buchanan Elementary School, 13th and E sts. se., or Bryan Elementary, 13th and B sts. se.

One hundred and nine students were transferred from the Dent Elementary School, 2d and South Carolina ave. se., to the Brent Elementary, 3d and D sts. se., and 183 from the Hilton Elementary, 6th and B sts ne., to Peabody Elementary, 5th and C sts. ne.

In addition 51 Negro students were transferred from the Lincoln Elementary School, 2d and C sts. se., to the vacated Lenox.

Today Negro elementary students attending part-time at the Crummell, Gallaudet and Providence sts. ne.; Payne, 15th and C sts. se., and Cook, 1st and P sts. nw., will move into Hayes.

Tomorrow parttime students at Randall Junior High School will transfer to the vacated S. J. Bowen building.

Annex in Use

Elementary students transferred to Eastern High School are housed in an 11-room annex to the main building apart from the high school students.

Some 500 of the students attended Webb and Blow in the morning yesterday for academic work and moved over to Browne in the afternoon for shops, laboratories and gym. An additional 500 students who were at Browne in the morning attended Blow and Webb in the afternoon.

The school program was extended 20 minutes to give the students time to walk the 15 blocks from Webb to Browne and the nine blocks from Blow to Browne.

Fire Wrecks American U. Frat House

Roof, Wall Fall; Room Burned Out In S St. N.W. Blaze

A fraternity house on the American University campus was gutted by an early morning fire yesterday.

The interior of one room at 2111 S st. nw. was burned out in another blaze.

A fireman, Pvt. Herbert O. Watkins, 31, 3717 Sheppard st., Brentwood, Md., was slightly injured when two pieces of apparatus collided going to the S st. fire.

Twenty pieces of apparatus responded to the two-alarm blaze at the Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity house shortly before 5 a. m.

Roof, Wall Cave In

The six-room, story-and-a-half structure was almost demolished. The roof and one wall caved in.

Paul F. Douglass, university president, who was on the scene, estimated damage at more than $5000. A short circuit in the refrigerator was blamed by firemen for the blaze.

No one was in the house at the time. Occupied by the fraternity for only two weeks, it is used only as a meeting place.

Room Burned Out

A first floor room at the S st. address, occupied by Pvt. Eric Higgins, a Canadian soldier, was burned out shortly after 11 a. m. Private Higgins was absent.

The fire was believed to have been started by sparks spilling through a hole in the chimney near the floor. It was discovered by a janitor.

Furniture and clothing were destroyed and the floor and woodwork charred. Other rooms were damaged only by smoke.

Book of Freedom Papers Proposed

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) proposed yesterday that the historic documents now on the Freedom Train be compiled into "The Freedom Book."

O'Mahoney introduced a joint resolution in the Senate to have the proposed book compiled by the librarian of Congress and published by the Government Printing Office.

The proposal was referred to the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration.

ENGINE CONKED OUT—Wrecked Navy bomber is removed from Sousa Bridge where it crash-landed a few minutes after 9 a. m. yesterday. The span, jammed with traffic only a short time before, was clear of automobiles when the crippled ship hurtled into the roadway. Navy Lieut. Soule T. Bitting, veteran of the Pacific and winner of the Navy Cross, walked away from the wreckage with only a cut on his forehead. The pilot was ferrying the plane from the Naval Air Station to Martinsburg, W. Va.

Pvt. Tolson Exonerated in Thief Slaying

Coroner's Jury Told Policeman Fired 5 Warning Shots

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Police Pvt. James E. Tolson, 28, who shot to death Carlton M. Barner, 20-year-old jewel thief, early Sunday.

Deliberating only 15 minutes, the jury held the shooting to be justifiable homicide after hearing testimony that Tolson, off duty at the time, fired five warning shots and shouted at Barner several times before wounding him fatally.

Barner, who lived at 905 Kent pl. ne., was found robbing the front window of Kay's Jewelry Store, 801 H st. ne. He was accompanied by another man who escaped while police and two passers-by who discovered the robbery chased Barner.

Homicide Squad Sergt. Alfred D. Clarke testified that Barner had been arrested by police several times and was known to them as a sexual pervert. On Thanksgiving night Barner was arrested in connection wit ha "yoke" case, but the complainant was intoxicated and could not identify the man, Clarke said.

when taken to Casualty Hospital

Othe rwitnesses testified that after the shooting, where he was pronounced dead, Barner was wearing a brassiere and had on lipstick and mascara.

Police found jewelry valued at $168.75 in Barner's clothes, and about $25 worth of jewelry near the shooting scene.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald presided at the inquest. Simon Mayer, manager of the jewelry store, said watches as a reward for their alertness were given to Pvt. Tolson and Yellow Cab driver Alex Woody, 26, who lives at the Canary Trailer Camp, Berwyn, Md., and Edward E. Ryan, 23, of 1229 H st. ne.

Woody and Ryan were the two who discovered the robbery while driving past the store; summoned police, and participated in the chase which followed.

Major Asks $50,000 In Collision Suit

Named defendant in the suit were Mrs. Mary M. O'Hara and her husband Robert of 5104 Klingle st. nw. The suit claimed that Mrs. O'Hara was operating the auto, which was owned by her husband, at the time of the accident.

'Adjutments' Drop

145 Traffic Tickets 'Fixed' Last Week

A total of 145 traffic tickets were "fixed" last week as compared to 177 for the week before, police precincts reported yesterday.

Of the 145 "fixes" or "adjustments" made, 123 were classified as warnings and the remaining 22 as cancellations in yesterday's list.

Five motorists were granted cancellations because of diplomatic immunity. Two were given cancellations because their autos were disabled and another two because the corporation counsel's office did not issue papers.

"Adjustments" were granted 19 motorists who made emergency stops or parked only momentarily, while 14 were let off on grounds that they had never before received warnings.

Strangers, Doctors Excused

Among those receiving warnings were six strangers to the city, five

Cold Snap To Be Eased By Warm Sun

Greater Washington motorists are in for another morning of frozen radiators, battery trouble and jammed clutches, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Weebee

Low temperatures of 27 in the District and 24 in the suburbs may be expected early this morning, the bureau warned.

This afternoon, however, will be 10 or 12 degrees warmer than yesterday, with a bright sun and gentle southwest winds easing Greater Washington's first good cold snap of the year.

Yesterday was the worst day for passenger cars since last March, the American Automobile Association reported after a busy morning.

Fifty-two emergency calls an hour were handled by the AA's emergency road service during the first four hours, with 90 per cent of the calls stemming from battery trouble. Frozen radiators and jommed clutchers were other troublemakers.

The cold weather, hitting the District and suburban sections with the arrival of December, sent temperatures spinning to a low of 13 in Bethesda and 22 in the District early yesterday.

Yesterday's Washington high was 41 at 2:56 p. m.; the 23 degree low was reached at 6:58 a. m.

The Weather Bureau noted below freezing temperatures in Virginia suburbs, with Clarendon reporting 20 and Barcroft 18. Besides Bethesda's low of 13, other nearby Maryland communities reported 14 in Riverdale and 16 in Brookside Manor.

Small snowfalls were recorded in several Virginia areas, with Lynchburg and Roanoke reporting flurries. Newport News had several hours of snow, which melted.

Lowest temperature in the East was reported at Greenville, Me., where the thermometer fell to zero. Freezing weather extended well into the south, with Rome, Ga., reporting a low of 24.

Clegg Counsel Wants Action On Complaint

Client, Veteran, Says He Was Illegally Jailed and Beaten

Counsel for Julius Willie Clegg yesterday demanded the District Commissioners take some action "without further delay" on the complaint of the 26-year-old war veteran that he was unlawfully arrested, jailed and beaten last August 2.

Roger Robb, Clegg's attorney, in a strongly worded letter addressed to John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, said he had been waiting "patiently" since August 7 for the results of the board's investigation.

But now, Robb declared, he was "shocked" to read in The Washington Post a statement by Maj. Robert Barrett, superintendent of police, in which Barrett "not only condones but attempts to justify the lawless practice of jailing and holding citizens for investigation."

Direct Question Hurled

Robb then hurled a direct question at the Commissioners:

"Am I to understand from this that nothing will be done about the illegal confinement of Clegg?"

The statement of Barrett referred to by the attorney was a defense of the long-standing police practice of arresting crime suspects on the general charge of "investigation." Barrett argued that the practice not only helped police in enforcing the law, but also prevented the innocent from being charged with a felony on the police records.

Clegg, an employe of The Washington Post who lives at 1106 21st st. ne., complained he was arrested August 2, held 34 hours incommunicado, and beaten as a result of being picked up at 6 a. m. by police as he was going to work. Police at the time were investigating the accosting of a woman on the street.

Attorney Robb made a formal request on August 7 that the Commissioners investigate Clegg's charges and try responsible police before the Police Trial Board.

Report Delayed

A report with recommendation for trial is understood to have been drawn up by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West. This report was held up, however, pending review by Daniel B. Maher, recently appointed special assistant corporation counsel. Maher's report is expected to be handed to the Commissioners by the end of this week.

In his letter yesterday, Robb demanded that if the Commissioners agree on a trial of the responsible police, that they be tried before a civilian board, instead of the regular Police Trial Board, which includes two high ranking police officers and an assistant corporation counsel.

"No board drawn from the ranks of the Police Department could fairly try a policeman accused of misconduct which has been publicly approved by the head of the department as standard police practice," Robb said.

Traffic Lull Had Cleared Motorists From Area

Red Light Halted Flow of Autos; Pilot Escapes With Minor Cut

By Charles Yarbrough
Post Reporter

Motorists crossed Sousa Bridge under "a wing and a prayer" at 9:06 a. m. yesterday.

A crippled Avenger torpedo bomber, with a Pacific Naval hero at the controls, crashed through the span's southwest railing, lunged across the roadway into the other railing and dangled 40 feet above the water.

Only a temporary lull in early morning traffic that had been running 18 cars a minute averted a grisly tangle of airplane and autos. Even then, some of the cars were close enough to be nicked by flying wreckage.

The pilot, Navy Cross winner Lieut. S. T. Bitting, 31, of Glenview, Ill., brought to a dead stop from about 75 miles an hour within width of the bridge, suffered only a gashed head and climbed unassisted from the plane.

The bridge, at the Pennsylvania ave. se. crossing of the Anacostia River, handles much of the traffic from southeast Washington. Its early morning traffic load is about 1050 cars per hour between 8:30 and 9 a. m.

A traffic light at Minnesota ave. and Pennsylvania ave. se., not far from the bridge's southeast approach, apparently had let the final heavy rush of traffic through and halted the next load immediately before the plane struck.

Unidentified hero of the crash was a motorist "in a red car" who saw the plane's course toward the span and either slowed or blocked traffic from the southeast end.

"That chap in the red car—a quick-thinking individual—seemed to see what I couldn't avoid," Bitting said later. "He blocked traffic at that end."

and drove away before police could get his name.

Bitting, whose torpedo plane division sank a Japanese cruiser in the battle for Leyte Gulf, was ferrying the plane from Norfolk, Va., to Chicago and had made an overnight stop at the Naval Air Station here. He is commanding officer of a naval rescue squadron.

He took off in the TBM-3E, a single-engine plane, at 9:04 a. m., heading about north. At 800 feet "the engine cut out, picked up, then cut out again," he said.

Picked River for Landing

"I picked the river because I've landed 'em in water before (off the flight deck of the carrier Savo Island).

"I called the tower (Naval Air Station) and told them I was going into the water."

Pleasure craft dotted the water 50 feet on either side of the bridge in the path of the plane.

"I started to go down between the spans, but the closer I got the smaller that opening looked. Then I decided to go over it."

As he pulled up the nose, the plane stalled, one wing dipping into the southeast railing about 150 feet from the south shore of the Anacostia River. The plane dipped over and down, the right wing snagging the other rail.

"It sounded like a building being demolished," said William R. Redman, 1609 23d st. se., driver of the last car to pass the spot where the plane struck the bridge.

"His motor was not running and I could see he was losing altitude. Then I looked back over my left shoulder and saw him hit. By the time I got the car stopped and got back to the plane, he was crawling out. I asked if I could get him to a hospital, but he said he'd be okay."

Mrs. James W. Hunt, 2008 38th st. se., was approaching the bridge from the southeast. "I saw the plane and when it seemed to veer a little toward my direction I thought he was trying to land—and I wanted to give him plenty of room."

She turned her car off on one of the curving approaches to the bridge—"the wrong way down a one-way drive," she said.

Two southeastern railroads, which had been accused of discriminatory practices against Negro firemen, under an agreement with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, yesterday were temporarily enjoined, at their own request from continuing the alleged discriminatory policy.

The injunction was granted by Associate Justice Alexander Holtzoff in District Court, who last week enjoined the union from "continuing" a policy of barring Negro firemen from Diesel locomotives.

A group of Negro firemen had charged in a suit that the effect of this practice was to throw Negroes out of work when a line shifted from steam operated locomotives to the Diesel variety.

Yesterday Attorneys Tom C. Davis and Robert Faulkner representing the Atlantic Coast Line and Attorney Sidney Alderman, general counsel for the Southern Railway Co., asked their lines be enjoined on the grounds that the lines then could legally refuse to carry out the agreement with the union.

For a Little Devonshire Town

Bazaar to Repay G. I. Debt To Pinhoe; Churchill Gets Unusual Birthday Gift

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE'S A CHRISTMAS bazaar at the British Embassy today and Massachusetts avenue's handsomest pile of bricks is open to all. Sale of the bazaar's elegant oddments will benefit the Pinhoe Community Center and Child Health Clinic. Though Pinhoe Community Center sounds rather like an ornithological rendezvous, it's actually an old Devonshire town in which many of our GI's were quartered.

The GI's, evidently a well-behaved lot, made a hit with the local population, were entertained in their homes. Building a clinic and health center is a return gesture for hospitality and understanding, lasting gesture of friendship between our two nations. Pinhoe's most famed celebrity, incidentally, was Dr. John Reynolds who, back in 1604, urged King James to authorize a new version of the Bible.

The bazaar boasts several unique specialties, a travel bureau supervised by Mrs. Jerauld Wright and much travelled Mrs. Cecil Lyons; paintings by Georgia O'Keeffe and O'Hara; some valuable antiques which will eventually be auctioned by the State Department's Maynard Barnes and our former Ambassador to Russia, "Bill" Bullitt.

Smoked Salmon for Churchill

Cigars? Brandy?

Nope.

A GIANT smoked salmon, selected by Gene, owner of New York's Colony restaurant. Wrapped reverently, the expensive monster was air shipped to London.

On his birthday Mr. C. was quoted personally as anticipating a recall to the political arena. On another birthday he quipped that he'd entered politics because of ambition, stayed on because he got angry.

Helping Hand For the Holidays

A NUMBER of decorative ladies burdened with official life, finding Christmas preparations overwhelming, asked this department to discover a helping hand. Thumbing through back files we found an accommodating concern coyly named Courtesy, Inc., which will undertake everything except footing bills.

It's run by Mrs. Kay Turner, who'll despatch someone to send out Christmas cards, wrap gifts, run a holiday party from mistletoe to plum pudding, do personal shopping, send packages overseas.

They have a charming young girl who speaks Spanish and will gladly pilot our South American neighbors through the mazes of Washington's shopping marts.

Now It's a Jewelry Exhibit

THESE DAYS women are fearfully artistic and creative. It's almost a "must" to stage an exhibition of some kind. First Mrs. Dean Acheson and Mrs. John Wiley joined forces at the Wildenstein Galleries with their paintings; then Mme. Martins showed off her sculpture; now Mrs. Huttleston Rogers, who graced this town for a number of years, will exhibit her jewelry in the same gallery December 7. Millicent works almost entirely in gold. She takes a nugget or its equivalent, melts and shapes it into rings, earrings and such. Most of her work is heavy, modernly primitive in feeling. Friends are anxious to see whether a summer among the Indians in Taos has influenced the glamorous Millicent's designs.

"Not Enough"

MRS. ROBERT LOW BACON is back in her F street house after three months in Europe. Effervescent Mrs. Bacon, Washington's outstanding hostess, and her daughter, Ivy, went on serious business—mainly evaluating our propaganda methods—or lack of them—especially in Germany.

After London, Brussels, Paris, Berlin, Mrs. Bacon traveled to Italy, Greece and through the Near East. She's as depressed as most intelligent observers in these areas, realizes that no one staying comfortably home can grasp the world's precarious position.

She thinks a Ruhr miner best summed up life for many Europeans on the verge of winter with little but cold, hunger and work ahead. "There's not enough to live on," he said, "and not enough to die for."

BRIG. GEN. and Mrs. Albert L. Cox entertained at an "at home" party yesterday from 6 to 8 o'clock. The occasion celebrated their wedding anniversary and the general's birthday anniversary. The Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Claiborne Royall assisted General and Mrs. Cox in receiving.

From out of town came Mrs. Murray Borden, jr., of Goldsboro, N. C., daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Cox; Glenn L. Martin of Baltimore and Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt.

Iranian Envoy, Wife, Dinner Hosts

TO CELEBRATE the fourth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Tehran, the Iranian Minister and Mme. Noury - Esfandiary entertained last evening at a dinner party for 20 people. The fete was held at the embassy at 8:15 o'clock.

Former United States Ambassador to Persia and Mrs. Wallace Murray were among the guests. Others included the Ambassador of Turkey, Huseyin Ragip Baydur, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, the Undersecretary of War for Iran, Maj. Gen. Abdollah Hedayat, and Mrs. Hedayat, John D. Jernegan, Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. John McCloy, the First Secretary of Iran and Mme. Aram, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner and the Commercial Attache of Iran and Mme. Nemazee.

The Declaration of the Independence of Persia was signed December 1, 1943, by Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, Marshal Stalin and the Shah of Persia.

To Give Luncheon

No Hat at All—or Ostrich Plumes—Equally Chic for Luncheon

By Peggy Preston

THE HATLESS fad is still with us. But if you prefer headgear your best bet right now is an ostrich-tipped chapeau.

At least that is how it seemed yesterday in the Mayflower Lounge during the luncheon hour when the gay, beautifully decorated room was thronged with smartly dressed women. There were dozens who, though wrapped in luxurious mink, wore nothing on their heads but a sleek hairdo. But the hat devotees were slightly in the majority. Colorful plumes waved merrily at almost every table. Second choice in bonnets appears to be big, pancake berets, unadorned save for a clip or pin. Flower hats, which will be the vogue right after Christmas, were worn yesterday only by a few women.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, member of a luncheon party at which Mrs. Jeanne Turner Smythe was hostess, was in a simple black costume. Her hat was also black with a high crown of starched veiling. Mrs. Smythe's hat was of green fabric with a wide, wrapped band of green and flame silk. Others in the group included Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. R. B. Jones.

Mrs. Rogers Denkla of Philadelphia was in the lounge with Mrs. Patterson Wanamaker. The former wore a dark green velvet frock, with tight bodice, long sleeves and ballerina skirt—but with no hat on her blond hair. Mrs. Wanamaker was in an all-brown ensemble with small, cloche hat and fragile veil.

Mrs. Edward Alexander, who as Gloria Baker was one of the first society glamour girls, was another of the hatless clan. Others of the same taste included Mrs. William Lewis MacCracken, the former Francine Whitten, and her luncheon partner, Miss Marye Thomas; Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., who wore a gray flannel suit with bright scarf as she lunched with her husband.

Miss Nina Lunn, whose engagement to Nat Luttrell was announced Sunday, was at a table with her fiance. She wore a three-piece suit of gray and gunmetal striped wool and a small black hat with a jaunty feather. Mrs. N. Robert Guggenheim, in suit and hat of matching sage green, lunched with Mrs. Peter Ansberry, wearing a black frock and mink-trimmed hat matching her coat.

The fashion show, which is a regular Monday feature during luncheon hour at the Mayflower, centered around "After 5" costumes. Among the ensembles modeled here were two frothy, white evening gowns, one with a full skirt of lace ruffles and another sprinkled with gold sequins.

Also shown were a green satin dinner gown with a bandeau of black sequins; a midnight blue satin frock, trimmed with matching sequins and several ballet length dinner and dance frocks.

Cultural Attache To Give Lecture

Miss Olga Briceno, youthful cultural attache of the Venezuelan Embassy, will lecture this evening at the Pan American Union on the music and customs of her country. Entitled "The Feast of Saint John's Day in Barlavento, Venezuela," the lecture will be delivered in English.

The region of Barlovento lies just east of Caracas, bordering the Caribbean, in the State of Miranda. Each year, from the middle to the end of June, these coastal valleys are the scene of festivities, when farmers and fishermen gather to celebrate St. John's Day with songs and dances.

Prior to her present assignment in Washington, Miss Briceno has served as cultural delegate to Spain, Portugal and Cuba. Her talk this evening coincides with a photographic exhibit of the Barlovento fiestas on view at the Pan American Union.

Job Has Just Begun in Palestine, Nathan, Bloom Tell Sisterhood

By Bessie Hackett

"The real job of getting the new Jewish nation on its feet is going to have to be done by the Jews themselves," Robert R. Nathan, liaison man between the Jewish Agency and the United States delegation to U. N., yesterday told the Sisterhood of Adas Israel Congregation.

The stalwart wartime economic adviser to President Roosevelt was a surprise guest at the organization's annual Hannukah gift luncheon at the Mayflower at which Representative Sol Bloom of New York was guest of honor. Both men played important roles in bringing about the birth of Jewish Palestine at the United Nations Conference table Saturday and both yesterday emphasized that "our battle is now before us."

"Those people over there (Palestine and displaced persons camps) are going to be in awfully tough straits for a while," explained Mr. Nathan. "Everyone is wound up emotionally. Clear, intelligent thinking is necessary. The principle of 'an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth' cannot go for every irresponsible action by hot-headed individuals.

Just Begun

"The political decision has been made," he continued, "but the job has just begun. The whole thing is still a big question. We still don't know how the British will behave, but we hope they'll cooperate with the U. N. in early fulfillment of the decision.

"People ask, "'Is it good? Is it bad? How many can be brought into Palestine at a time? Where shall we bring them from first? Cyprus . . . the DP camps . . . Cairo . . . Bagdad . . . Tripoli? And how much money will it all take?'

"The answer is, 'We don't know.' However, it will take hundreds of millions of dollars. A government will have to be set up and loans made. Houses will have to be built . . . factories and facilities for an increased population of 20 to 25 per cent within about two years. And all will want to go to Palestine at once . . . but transfer will take time. We're going to have to dig down deep to help these people.

Unity Needed

"Now, more than ever, unity is needed by the Jewish people. And all this talk of dual citizenship . . . 'How can I be a loyal American and a loyal Palestinian at the same time?' . . . is hocus-pocus. It's common loyalty to be good American citizens and help those who need assistance, but, as fellow coreligionists, it's up to us more than anyone else to make what's been promised us politically a real, successful reality!"

Arab Parallel

Representative Bloom pointed out that the Arab states which have been objecting so strenuously to the partition of Palestine came into being by similar territorial partitions after World War I.

"Instead of the League of Nations, however, this time it was the United Nations that made the decision," he said. "Our state is just as legal as a case decided by the Supreme Court."

"As a nation," he declared, "the Jews will be represented at the United Nations, and they'll have their own Ambassador. We have our work cut out for us. We'll have to show the world that we can be a nation.

"There is no question," he concluded, "that we'll be celebrating the Passover service in Palestine next year."

Mrs. Roosevelt Convinced

Both speakers also gave a behind-the-scenes report of the tremendous work involved in securing votes for the necessary two-thirds majority to carry the vote favoring partition of the Holy Land into Jewish and Arab states. They paid tribute to a long list of individuals and organizations for "leg work, hand work and head work" in making Jewish victory possible.

Mr. Nathan mentioned Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who was "basically opposed" to partition because of her idealistic beliefs that there should be no national and geographical boundaries because of religion. "Even she was finally convinced," he stated, "that partition was the only solution to the Jewish problem at this particular time."

Mrs. Meyer Goldberg, president of the sisterhood, presided, and Mrs. Harry D. Friedman, luncheon chairman, reported that $3350 was raised by the gathering. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz and Joseph A. Wilner introduced the speakers.

Democrats Need Aggressive Leaders, Coffin Tells Club

If conditions between the United States and Russia worsen, this country will swing more and more toward isolationism. This is the opinion expressed by Tris Coffin, radio commentator and author of "Missouri Compromise," at a luncheon meeting yesterday of the Womens' National Democratic Club.

In a question-answer period following a talk on current political leaders, Coffin said that he believed Taft and Dewey will cancel out each other as presidential candidates.

Pointing out the differences between the Democratic and Republican Parties, the speaker said that the Republican Party is split with healthy conflicts. About the Democratic Party, he said: "The party is worn out. New aggressive leaders are needed. There is no right or left in the party—it is one."

Mrs. Norman Littell, program chairman, introduced the speaker and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, president, presided.

Young Wife Has Very Sweet Husband Whom She Loves Dearly, But Due to His Lesser Education She's Ashamed of Him Socially

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 21 years of age, have been married four years and have a very sweet husband. He is a very nice looking young man and we are very much in love.

My husband — I'll call him George—doesn't drink or smoke or have any really bad habits, although of course he has some little faults. Most of his faults, it is plain to see, are caused by his being uneducated.

Our trouble in married life seems to be that my education is better than his. We don't fuss too much about this difference, but I am embarrassed quite a bit about it. I am a high school graduate with business college training, whereas he never finished grammar school.

Man Is Proud Of His Wife

GEORGE has a very pleasant disposition and he has and makes lots of friends; but I am afraid that both his friends and mine notice his poor language. He has much room for improvement there. He doesn't read or write any too well.

He seems to be very proud of me, but I turn down social invitations because I am afraid that I will be embarrassed by his lack of education. My married life could be very happy if only this one problem of embarrassment could be solved. Can you help me? D. D.

Man Seems Better Fitted for Living

DEAR D. D.: In editing your letter for publication, I've caught three grammatical errors in composition, also one error in spelling, —which suggests that your own literary cultivation is nothing to boast about; and that indeed it ought to be a lot better than it is, to justify the amount of schooling you've had.

However, if George never got through grammar school, there's no arguing the fact that you were at least exposed to much more academic training than he received.

Even so, it's an open question as to which of you is making most constructive use, in terms of "abundant living," of such educational benefits as each was given.

Despite your greater claim to literacy, which you cite as evidence of superiority, you are a very uncomfortable person, wretchedly unsure of yourself socially,—due of course to an ingrained complex of inferiority feelings that date from childhood. Such feelings are always at work in chronic states of embarrassment or anxious defensive backing-away from anticipated humiliation.

He Has Basic Self-Esteem

UNLIKE YOU, George has a happy disposition. He makes and holds lots of friends. Naturally. He is able to do so because he has basic self-esteem, which is wondrously magnetic in winning acceptance and gaining respect. Basic self-esteem might be called the indispensable social-success factor: the archstone of personal happiness and good relations with others.

This, then, is the outstanding difference between you and George. It is the fountain source of his sweet disposition and social aplomb; also the secret spring of your acute anxiety in company, for which you make him the whipping boy—with cockeyed injustice, it must be said.

Perhaps George isn't exactly your type, and had you been normally self-confident when he came courting, perhaps you mightn't have acquiesced. You say he shows great pride in you, and possibly his eager deference has always been his great appeal: a form of ego-salve and ego-support you gratefully seized on and helplessly cling to, even while convinced that you married beneath yourself.

The most help I can give is a better understanding of what goes on here; and I think I've done so. Now it's up to you to solve the problem, by getting rid of false values and unconscious fears that distort your outlook. M. H.

Cover and cook slowly 1 hour. Pare the potatoes and scrub the carrots. Peel onions. Add to veal. Add more water to prevent burning and to keep 2 cups of stock. Cover. Cook slowly another hour. # League Adopts Food-Sharing Plan

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia yesterday launched a concrete food conservation project to help increase overseas relief and thereby help to reduce inflationary prices on the home front. Members, through a unanimously adopted resolution, pledged themselves to observe one of five suggested methods of food saving to carry out the project.

The five ways are:

(a) Plan meals each day so as to cut out one whole course from the day's heaviest meal and put the cash value of the food saving into a "share bank" for foreign relief,

(b) Cut out one vegetable or meat serving from main course and deposit difference in "share bank," or

(c) Establish one fast day per week, and ask able-bodied members of the family to forego one or more meals entirely, or to eat only "fast meal" in lieu of a regular meal and put the difference in the "foreign relief share bank," or

(d) Take "unseen foreign friend" along to grocery store when shopping and deposit amount her dinner would cost if she were on hand to eat here; or

(e) Deduct a reasonable amount of cash from regular weekly food budget and put it in the "share bank" for foreign relief.

Copies of the resolution are being forwarded to Carroll Reece, Chairman of the Republican National Committee; to the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, as well as the Republican State headquarters.

Sharing With Hungry

The motion also pledged league members to further restrict "their general use of fats and grains." Prepared by the organization's Food Conservation Program Committee (composed of Mrs. Roy F. James, chairman; Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, Mrs. Ralph W. Payne and Mrs. Pearl Gray Moore), the resolution's preamble pointed out the need for overseas relief and declared a sound future of freedom, prosperity and plenty for all the world could best be achieved by sharing with the hungry now.

Action was taken at the league's morning session in the Mayflower Hotel preceding a talk by Representative Everett Dirksen of Illinois. The speaker made a strong appeal for overseas relief. He told the audience that the United States has three choices concerning its role in Europe, viz, abandon western Europe and hope for peace, which at the same time would be a matter of giving up free markets; (2) give niggardly support and aid; (3) give aggressive, adequate aid in the form of food.

Losing Freedom

Stressing the encroachment of Communism in western Europe, Dirksen said that Austria, France, Germany and Italy must have help immediately if they are to be saved from the "Red Menace." Our only hope of a buffer between the Soviet's hammer and sickle lies in maintaining those countries," he declared. If they lose their freedom we will lose ours eventually."

He predicted that in Czechoslovakia "freedom will be liquidated" within 120 days. Dirksen said that there was no freedom in Poland, Bulgaria, Romania or Hungary and described how the Soviet had taken over in those countries.

Mrs. Joseph H. Farrington, league president, presided.

Farm Women Urged to Work For U.N., Peace

The deep desire for peace felt by women of many lands was strongly evidenced at the Amsterdam meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World in September, Miss Florence L. Hall told the Capital division, Women's National Farm and Garden Club, yesterday.

Mme. Van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, was guest of honor at the club's luncheon at the YWCA, when Miss Hall described the gathering in Holland of 550 rural women from 25 countries.

"There was a seriousness and urgency about this meeting that I have never felt at any other," said Miss Hall. "The women passed one resolution declaring that war should no longer be considered as a solution of world difficulties, and another urging immediate development of a common world language.

'International Day'

"They urged farm women of all countries to support United Nations activities," she said. "The establishment of a long-time friendly aid program of packages and letters was favored, as was the holding of an "international day" each year. They planned an international essay contest on "A Rural Woman's Day," to give women a picture of the lives led by their counterparts in other countries."

Mrs. Lance Lewis of Australia was a special guest at the meeting and told of the work of the Associated Country Women of Australia in the "bush" country. She described rest homes established in small towns where lonely rural women can come to visit together and enjoy a stay in town.

Emergency Communication

The work of "bush nurses" and "flying doctors" has also been promoted by the country women's association, she said, and "pedal machines" for communication in emergencies have been provided for isolated families.

" 'Out back,' as we call it, there's often no means of communication when there is an accident or illness," she said. "With the 'pedal machines,' messages can be sent and a 'flying doctor' summoned."

Mrs. R. Winston Holt, a former president of the club, presided at yesterday's meeting.

St. Martin's Mothers' Club To Stage Benefit Fair

St. Martin's Mothers' Club will hold a benefit supper and card party, December 3 and 4 in the clubhouse, 1912 North Capitol st. Proceeds will go toward the scholarship fund.

In addition to games, prizes, and buffet supper, there will be a sale of fancy work, toys, religious articles and potted plants.

Mrs. Mildred Kilburg, chairman of ways and means, is general chairman.

Doings of the Day . . .

Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, general chairman of the benefit party for National Homeopathic Hospital scheduled for December 15 at Hotel 2400, will entertain committee chairmen for the affair at a luncheon, 1 p. m., at her home on Charleston Terrace . . . Women's City Club will meet at 11:30 a. m. at its clubhouse to hear Miss Genevieve Reynolds, club editor of The Washington Post, discuss her recent trip through the Pacific. Luncheon will follow . . . A square-dancing party will be given, 7:30 p. m. at 1226 Connecticut ave. nw., by Just-For-Fun Club.

Household Tips to Remember

Wash and dry all silver and steel articles as soon after using as possible.

Wrapping the lace to be stored in waxed paper will prevent it from dry rot.

Throw out the rusty coat hanger before you transfer some of the rust to a good garment.

A stain on the bed ticking can usually be removed by applying a paste of raw starch and water. Let it dry on and then brush off with a stiff brush.

It is said that coal dust mixed with water and banked at the back of the grate will dampen down a fire and keep it burning steadily for hours.

Your Questions on Homemaking

My husband has built a case for our record changer. He made it out of 5-ply wood. It has no veneer coat and we would like to know how to finish it. It is to be on the table next to the radio, which has a walnut finish. We would like to make it look as near like the radio as possible (considering the difference in wood). From previous experience, we have found that an ordinary walnut stain gives too much of a dark and light contrast on this kind of soft wood and we cannot seem to get the polished effect we would like. Can you suggest a type of finish that would look well next to the radio cabinet and give good results on this kind of wood? F. I. W.

From what you say, I take it that you previously used a penetrating stain on plywood and didn't like the way it brought out the pattern in the wood. Pigmented oil stains, which are more like thin paints, obscure the grain slightly. Perhaps one of these would give a finish that you would like. Another thing you might use is a varnish stain, which also stands on the surface and obscures the natural grain of the wood. Painting the case with walnut-colored paint might also be solution to your problem. With all these, experimentation would be necessary and perhaps some mixing to get a walnut shade that would match the radio.

Will you please tell me how to give a cocktail party? I should like to know such things as the correct number of guests to invite and how to entertain them, what drinks, hors d'oeuvres and refreshments to serve, and how to serve them, and the proper hour for such an affair. H. M. F.

The number of guests you invite to a cocktail party depends on how many you wish to entertain and the size of your living room and any adjoining rooms, such as the dining room, that may be used for the party. It's not necessary to provide a place to sit down for all your guests. People usually stand around in groups and talk at cocktail parties. However, you don't want the room to be uncomfortably crowded so that moving around is difficult and serving a problem. Late afternoon is the usual time for cocktail parties, 5 to 7 p. m. or 6 to 8 p. m., for instance. Several kinds of alcoholic beverages are usually served at such affairs. You might have Manhattans and Martinis (these are available already mixed) and also have materials on hand for making highballs if the guests prefer them. It would also be wise to have a nonalcoholic cocktail such as tomato juice available for guests who do not like stronger drinks. There are many different types of hors d'oeuvres you might have. Almost any modern cook book has recipes for tempting canapes, both hot and cold. You could also have a tray of carrot sticks, stuffed celery, radishes, olives and the like. Potato chips, sharp cheese and crackers, and shrimps on toothpicks (ready to dip into highly flavored mayonnaise) are appropriate refreshments. At any rate, assemble an attractive and varied assortment of these things. The drinks and hors d'oeuvres can be arranged on a side table or on the dining room table. Then they can be passed from time to time by friends whom you have asked to help you in serving. Some masculine member of the family or friend will probably serve as bartender for you if necessary. Or, if you want to spend more on your party, you can employ servants for the evening to help with the serving. No particular entertainment is needed at a cocktail party. The conversation and the cocktails provide all the entertainment necessary.

I have a moleskin fur cape and would like to use it to trim a suit. It will be only a temporary arrangement, but I would like to clean and glaze it to freshen it up. Can you tell me how this can be done at home? E. Z. H.

Home economists of the United States Department of Agriculture recommend the following method for cleaning fur at home: Dampen corn meal with a dry-cleaning solvent such as carbon tetrachloride. Rub this well into the fur with your hands. Then shake, brush and air the fur.

If badly soiled, small pieces of good quality fur can be washed in warm suds. Use a milk cake soap with an oil base or a jellylike oil soap. Rinse. Squeeze out as much water as possible, for an excess of water in the pelt hardens it. Hang the fur up by the edge so air can circulate on both sides as it dries. If the skin hardens, work between the hands before it is dry. When thoroughly dry, shake and brush until the fur is fluffy.

The following method of glazing the fur is recommended: Brush and comb fur well. Lay it out flat, and with a damp sponge stroke the fur lightly in the direction that the hair grows, that is, with the flow of the fur. Be careful that no water penetrates to the skin. Cover fur with tissue paper to absorb and keep moisture from the skin. Run a hot iron very quickly over the paper. Lift paper and run iron quickly over the fur—again with the flow of fur.

Should yarn be dyed before or after making up? I have some once-used yarn that I'm reusing to make mittens. It happens to be baby pink, which is no longer a suitable color. D. L. R.

Wait until you've knitted the mittens to dye them. They'll be easier to handle in the dye bath and there'll be less chance of having a streaked effect in the finished product. You might dye a few extra strands of yarn with them to use later if mending is necessary.

Pomander balls are made by studding oranges or grapefruit thickly with whole cloves. Often a cord or ribbon is fastened on with a pin or a tack, so that the ball can be hung up in the clothes closet. The spice acts as a preservative for the fruit and makes the air fragrant in the closet.

I have a considerable amount of dextri-maltose and lime water left over from making my baby's formula. Can you tell me any other uses for these? W. R. C.

The purpose of adding lime water to milk is to prevent the formation of hard curds and to thus increase the digestibility of the milk, so I see no reason why you could not continue to add it to milk when making custards, puddings and so forth for the baby. Lime water is sometimes used to counteract acidity in adults. For amounts to use for this purpose, check the directions on the bottle. Dextri-maltose is a mild sweet and I should think it would be excellent to sprinkle on baby's cereals, fruits and other foods for sweetening. Also, use it in the cooking of custards and puddings to sweeten them.

PETUNIA!

FOUR, they tell me,
Are burners a-plenty

But heavens to Betsy
I need about twenty!

Then do some doubling up, Petunia! For instance, you'll save heat and time by cooking vegetables in the lower part of your double boiler while you make the cream sauce in the top.

Food Saving Reminders

To get more vitamin C from oranges, serve the juice unstrained, or serve sliced oranges.

Don't prepare vegetables ahead of time and let them stand in water until time to cook. You'll lose food value and flavor.

To get lettuce eaten, in salads, break up leaves and toss them in with other salad ingredients in the salad bowl. Mix all with a zippy dressing. Serving individual salads on a large dry lettuce leaf too often means that the large leaf of lettuce is not eaten and goes to the garbage.

One good way to use left-over meat, is to chop the meat fine and mix with left-over cooked vegetables, such as peas, carrots, and small onions. Then put in a casserole, top with fluffy mashed potatoes, and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until brown.

Antique Styles Revived

To meet the challenge of dress fashions that hark back to the turn of the century, jewelry designers are fashioning modernized versions of antique brooches, clips, earrings and necklaces. The new designs often use palladium, a white precious metal, because it lends itself to elaborate, intricately wrought pieces, particularly the fashionable three-dimensional motifs.

Fitzgeraldian Priest ...

A Homey Comedy On C. U. Boards

By Richard L. Coe

IN "JENNY KISSED ME," Catholic University's Playwriting Festival has a manuscript play audiences will relish.

This time the lively theater workers of Brookland have turned from the serious dramas of their past two offerings to the simplicity of homey comedy. There is nothing sophisticated or learned about Jean Kerr's latest except her skilled, spontaneously amusing dialogue. For despite the familiarity of her setting and characters, Mrs. Kerr's dialogue is fresh, crisp and natural.

The story tells of a Roman Catholic priest whose parishioners are forced to give up such minor pleasures as bingo in deference to his belief that cosmetics, pretty clothes and the mistrusted bingo are works of the tempter. When his housekeeper's niece comes to live under his roof and the problems of adolescence become his problems, too, he changes his tune.

Since the priest is one Father Moynihan of unmistakably Irish background, one inevitably thinks of Barry Fitzgerald's "Going My Way" character. It is an honest resemblance, but it is to Mrs. Kerr's credit that his talk comes naturally.

The character suffers, however, from the length of the third act, which ends fully 15 minutes before the curtain falls. By drawing out the priest's changed viewpoint, she forces him into shifting phases of character that make him too weak a figure to be the worthy shepherd of a parish. While such a figure might well exist within the hierarchy of the church, by spinning out his weaknesses past the limits of her third act Mrs. Kerr allows one too much leeway to ruminate about the debilitating effects of such a man, however golden hearted.

Jenny the Gentle

In Jenny, the troublesome niece, Mrs. Kerr has created another refreshing character. While Father Monyihan expects her to be just the sort of 18-year-old of which he most disapproves, she turns out to fit his most specific ideal—plain, hardworking and alive. Their relationship comes to a climax when he, realizing that the only way he can get her out of his house is to have her married off (a sorry pitfall for a religious figure!), he tells her: "Your face—you've been leaving it too bare." Jenny proves she can be charmingly attractive and finally does trap a man—and one of her own choosing.

While the supporting characters are familiar—the too helpful neighbor, the 20-year-old lad who is hep and gruesome, and assorted female teen-agers—these, too, are written with sure knowledge of their exact effect.

They are acted by the university's students with the same sure aplomb. Jill Leahy is eminently sound as the Margaret Hamilton sort of neighbor and Robert is sleekly wise to the ways of youths whose tastes run to bigger and whoopier record collections.

For the title role, the university has a visiting player, Pamela Rivers, who appeared last season at the National as Pauline Lord's daughter in "The Glass Menagerie." Miss Rivers is effective as Jenny, though it's no slur on her to remark that she is by no means outstanding in the cast of student players.

Reviewer Lee Brady Scores

Certainly the hero of the acting company is Leo Brady in the role of Father Moynihan. Not only is this a long part (some 80 sides) and is Brady playing it with outstanding vocal ease, he went into the role only three days before the play opened. A professional had been cast for this, but backed out on the ground that the role was a longer one than he could easily remember.

Readers of this page will know Brady as a contributor of weekly film reviews of outspoken perception. If you want to see Instructor-Playwright Brady in the flesh—a flesh that is twice his acting age—you couldn't do better than watch him as the verbose, bumbling priest.

While "Jenny Kissed Me" does not strike a friendly observer as the sort of material which will stand Broadway demands, it should have even a greater measure of success on the nonprofessional stages than Mrs. Kerr's previous adaptation of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." That comedy is now the second most widely performed play on the country's amateur stages. "Jenny" should prove even more popular.

"JENNY KISSED ME," a new comedy in three acts by Jean Kerr, directed by Walter Kerr and Dr. Josephine McGarry Cullen, with setting and lighting by James Waring. At Catholic University Theater.

Youth Faces 2d Trial on Same Charge

A Lanham, Md., youth, acquitted in Hyattsville police court last month of a manslaughter charge in connection with a traffic death, went on trial on the same charge yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court in Upper Marlboro.

The youth, William Andrew Terry, 3d, is charged as driver of an automobile in which three passengers were killed last August 1 when the car failed to make a curve and crashed into a pole on Finn's ln. near East Riverdale.

Circuit Judge Charles Marbury ordered the trial to begin after upholding the State's right to appeal a police court acquittal. Terry's attorneys argued the State's appeal placed his client in "double jeopardy."

The trial, centering on conflicting testimony as to who actually was the driver of the car, will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

In upholding the State's appeal, Judge Marbury cited a United States Court of Appeals decision upholding a Connecticut statute which gave the right of appeal to the State. A Maryland staute gives the right of "either party" to appeal a trial magistrate's judgment "if aggrieved by the decision."

Terry maintains the car was driven by Barton G. Bryan, 26, of Landover Hills, one of the three killed in the crash. The others killed were Bryan's wife, Mrs. Clara Bryan, 24, and Miss Cathryn F. Raxten, 22, of Cheverley Manor.

Montgomery To Need More School Funds

With five million dollars already approved for a two-year school construction program, Montgomery County will need "at least" nine million additional dollars for school construction by 1950, Assistant School Superintendent E. M. Douglass estimated yesterday.

The disclosure was made with announcement by the school official that a survey to determine the exact construction needs of the county will get under way next Monday.

Among other things to be determined by the survey in the county's 62 schools, Douglass said, will be the order of priority for projects authorized under the two-million-dollar program, and a study of overenrollment in some schools which might be reduced by transferring pupils to schools not so crowded.

Douglass predicted there will be a need for "heavy" expansion and recalled the school board had asked for 14 million dollars prior to fixing of the 1947-48 budget.

"Instead we were granted five million dollars, over a two-year period, and with the obvious and rapid population influx, it seems apparent we will need in excess of the difference in the two amounts in 1949," he said.

Allis Chalmers Union Officers Fired by Board

Detroit, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—The international executive board of the United Auto Workers (CIO) voted unanimously tonight to fire the officers of the union's Allis Chalmers local in Milwaukee, Wis., and set up an "administrator" with sweeping powers to reorganize the local and regain bargaining rights in the plant.

With President Walter P. Reuther calling the signals, the board named Duane Greathouse, Chicago-Milwaukee regional director, as administrator.

The local membership last spring threw in the sponge and returned to work after an 11-month strike, without company recognition or a contract.

Meanwhile suave, polished Richard T. Leonard, once a $7000-a-year vice president of the UAW today applied for his old job as a welder at the De Sota auto plant.

Leonard, ousted in the triumphant sweep in the union by President Walter P. Reuther, today will don work clothes, carry a lunch pail and do spot welding for $1.42 an hour.

Methodist Clergy to Meet

'Voice of America' Starts Broadcast To Eastern Sibera

The State Department's "Voice of America" yesterday began a new 30-minute Russian-language broadcast to Vladivostok and the Soviet maritime provinces of eastern Siberia.

The new program, which will be heard in the Soviet areas at 9 p. m. each day, brings the State Department's radio broadcasts to Russia to a total time of two hours a day in four separate transmissions.

Three half-hour programs are aimed at western Russia.

The new program will go out over the State Department's new 50-kilowatt relay transmitter in Manila and another in Honolulu. The program of news and features will originate in New York.

11 Imprisoned Citizens Of U. S. Freed by Poles

Warsaw, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The government said today that 11 of 64 imprisoned persons claiming American citizenship have been released and that a mixed Polish-American commission has agreed to recommend that 11 others be considered United States nationals. A spokesman said the government had proof that the other 42 had acquired Polish citizenship.

2 Sentenced For Surplus Cloth Fraud

George A. Gormley, 51-year-old Washington businessman, was sentenced to five years in prison yesterday in the United States District Court at Alexandria for defrauding the Government of 30,000 yards of war surplus cloth.

An accomplice, Louis V. Dionne, former War Assets Administration clerk at the Alexandria Army Quartermaster Depot, was sentenced to three years. Dionne was the Government's key witness.

Appeal Entered

Gormley's attorneys noted an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals after Judge Albert V. Bryan denied a motion for a new trial. He was released under $5000 bond pending hearing on the appeal.

Dionne pleaded guilty to a charge he falsified an invoice to permit Gormley to obtain $96,000 worth of woolen cloth for $24,000.

The Federal Grand Jury, reporting at the opening of the District Court's December term, brought indictments against 12 men.

George Gotrell and Ralph D. Mullis, addresses not listed, were indicted on charges of escaping from the Federal Work Camp at Occoquan, Va. Both pleaded guilty and were given additional sentences of a year and a day. Gotrell's original sentence was only three months.

Bobby Taylor, address also not listed, pleaded guilty to an indictment charge of attempting to escape from the Federal Work Camp at Lorton, Va., where he was serving 3 to 12 years for robbery, and was sentenced to an extra three months.

Others indicted were:

Laaste Battle, 1225 Half st., sw., theft of Government property; Leroy Glover, address not listed, assault with a dangerous weapon; Albert L. Elwell, Falls Church, with Fred W. Bray, 308 E. Del Ray ave., Alexandria, theft from a Government reservation; Albert A. Rogers, Stafford County, Va., forging and uttering United States bonds; Paul L. Junkins, address not listed, with Joseph P. # Truman Asks Extension of Maritime Act

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to extend the authority of the Maritime Commission to operate, sell, and charter Government-owned vessels, built during the war, until June 30 next year.

Prompt action was asked "in order to avoid needless disruption of the vital services now being provided," and "to prevent a breakdown in vital shipping services."

The present authority expires February 29.

1200 Dry-Cargo Vessels

More than 1200 dry-cargo vessels are now chartered to American citizens by the commission, Mr. Truman told Congress.

"The bulk of this fleet is devoted to carrying vital relief cargo, chiefly coal and grain exports," he wrote. "Its continued operation will be essential in furnishing aid to foreign countries during this winter."

The commission is now operating emergency passenger vessels and tankers through general agents, Congress was told.

"It is necessary to continue the authority for the operation of these passenger vessels if we are to meet essential needs for which no other passenger service is available," the President said.

Need of Tankers Stressed

"While the number of tankers operated by the commission is being steadily reduced as tankers are sold under the Ship Sales Act, those which remain unsold must be kept in operation to assist in averting a serious world-wide shortage of petroleum."

In the near future, Mr. Truman added, "other questions concerning the maritime industry" will require new legislation.

"Our most immediate need," he wrote, "however, is to assure the maintenance of essential shipping services by continuing in effect the present provisions of the law."

He asked action on extending the law, "well in advance of its expiration date."

GSI, Cafeteria Union Stalemated Over Red Issue

Both sides stood pat yesterday in the dispute between Government Services, Inc., and Cafeteria Workers Local 471 (CIO) over management demands that union officers file anti-Communist affidavits.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, president of GSI, reiterated his demand that the union file the anti-Red pledges, indicating that the firm will not bargain with union officials unless this is done.

Oliver T. Palmer, chairman of the union's negotiating committee, immediately flung back charges that the firm which operates cafeterias and snack bars in Federal buildings "is only using this as a smoke screen to evade its obligations to the workers."

He announced that the union has filed a 30-day strike notice against GSI with the Federal Conciliation and Mediation Service. The present contract expires December 31.

Beer Tax Collections Slump in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—November beer tax collections in Virginia totaled $326,789—a slump of nearly $200,000 from the $525,493 collected during October and considerably below the November, 1946, collections of $438,081.

The apparent recent drop in beer drinking in the State, however, was reflected to a much lesser degree in tax collections for the first five months of the fiscal year. Figures from July through November in 1947 were $2,313,524 as compared with $2,424,044 for the same period in 1946.

Blinding Fog Closes Over London Area

London, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Dense, blinding fog closed down over a 300-mile belt of Britain today, causing at least two deaths and 17 injuries, and all but halted rail and highway transportation. From Dover to Carlisle. All planes were grounded. Shipping on the Thames estuary was at a standstill. Trains crept at a snail's pace.

Whose Ideology Will Conquer Asia Held Era's Poser

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), a former medical missionary to China, declared today that the most critical question of this century is "whose ideas are going to win with the billion people in Asia."

Addressing a student-faculty convocation at Virginia Tech, he said that justice, not power politics, must be the motive power to this country's world leadership.

"We can't escape the world," he said. "We can't buy it, as Henry Wallace would have us do with Russia. We can't run it by force. We can lead it."

Describing the ideas on which America was founded as the "most explosive . . . ever turned loose in the world," he said these ideas must be bolstered everywhere.

If this country lets China go by default it will mean that "we defeated Japan, but that Russia won the war," he told students and faculty members.

If the N. C. commission approves, and the Virginia Corporation Commission also approves, the railroad would discontinue operating trains No. 1 and 2 on Sundays but would continue running them on week days for the handling of mail and express.

Christiansburg, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—Jeff Willard Smith of Wise County, was killed, and a companion, Garnie Burchel Dorton, also of Wise, and six students at Virginia Polytechnic Institute were injured in a head-on collision between two automobiles a few miles east of here on Route 11 today. Besides Dorton, the injured were: Leonard Maxwell, Kelvin Kable, Jim Datig, Jim Backof, Irving Appel, and James Plackis, all of V.P.I.

Hands Across the Sea

Winchester, Va., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Doris Crompton, first woman mayor of Winchester, England, has sent "warmest wishes for the Christmas and New Year" to the mayor and citizens of this city. The traditional greeting followed Mayor C. R. Anderson's message to the English town on July 4.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Here's Gem of a Story About a "Germ Appraiser"

Lucille Payne of 4012 Bladensburg rd., Brentwood, Md., forwards an amazing clipping about the director of our local zoo. Our morning contemporary said:

"These (birds) are practically rudderless right now . . . but Mann will sprout elaborate long tails, spatulated on the end."

Lucille thinks that if the item is true, Director Mann will prove the most interesting specimen in the zoo's collection.

One of our esteemed afternoon contemporaries, which guarantees the truth of its contents, did equally well in its Thanksgiving Day issue.

Mrs. R. B. Murto, jr., of 419 Oglethorpe st. nw., thinks it might have been a case of too much turkey. At any rate, the item read:

"A Washington germ expert has returned from three months in Frankfort, Germany, where he appraised millions of dollars worth of jewels once stored in vaults as Nazi loot. He is Harry I. Woodruff of 1660 Lanier pl. nw., who was named official germ appraiser for the International Refugee Organization."

Well, at least they're consistent.

HOBBY LOBBY

Joe Tarbox of 1743 Que st. nw. wants some help with his collection of match folders.

He indicates that those who pursue this hobby have devised albums for the arrangement of their collections, just as philatelists have albums for their stamps.

And he wonders whether any fellow collectors can advise him what kind of album to get and where to get it.

District Liners interested in this hobby may communicate directly with Joe, and when the returns are all in, maybe Joe will give us a report on how he made out.

WILSON REVISITED

Here's a belated reaction to Earl Wilson's sarcastic cracks about Washington's "gourd-shaped secretaries." It's by G. A. Fisher of 1442 Spring rd. nw.:

He has spoken of
The gourds I love
Which but reflects
His Woolworth specs
Could use a little dusting.

I've seen those wrecks
With pearl gray necks
New York calls secretaries.
They look like bags
Of burlap rags

NO CUSTOMERS?

Mrs. Louis Meltzer of 3900 14th st. nw, thinks the policy of one of our night clubs is pretty funny. The club advertises:

"No cover, no minimum, no admission."

PERSONAL NOTES

Wayne Ogle, 1743 Que st. nw.: Your answer to the Thanksgiving problem meets some of the requirements, but I still think mine is right. I'm writing you a letter to argue the matter further, and am prepared to defend my position to the last drop of my stationery.

Mrs. Freeman Erle Prior, 2321 N. Tuckahoe st., Falls Church, Va.: Thanks. "I think we'll just call our definitions game "New Word Department" from now on.

o+o

NEW WORDS DEPT.

Karen Kruse of 4538 Harrison st. nw, coins two new definitions for our word game.

A "philatelush" is a guy who can't think of anything but his stamp collection.

A "paytient" is one who pays his doctor bills.

And Ellen Wilson of 1819 G st. nw. adds the information that her family has for many years used a home-made word to describe things which are grimy and dingy.

o+o

QUESTION AND ANSWER

E. S. B. of Branchville, Md., sends in two streetcar tokens and writes:

"I seem to have missed reading the reason for your token collection, though I'm sure it must be for a worthy cause. So here are two that turned up in the pocket of a coat returned from storage."

Golly, have we been collecting tokens for so long that the reason has become obscure?

For the benefit of the latecomers, let me repeat that the tokens are being donated to the Children's Hospital Building Fund, which is still some $15,000 short of the amount required to give the kids a modern hospital building.

o+o

SKIRT SLIP

Sororities at George Washington University are preparing for their annual Goat Show skits, and the school paper is taking due notice of the event.

Eugene P. (Pen) Stephens of 2115 F st. nw., clips an item from the Hatchet which informs us that:

"Skirts will be judged for originality, cleverness, presentation, timing, and audience appeal."

Never mind the skirts, fellows—your slip is showing.

NEW YORK.—Lord Lovett, Britain's Commando hero, this week sent via Pan-Am, to the Illinois St. Andrew's Haggis dinner, a complete Haggis—a 17th Century English dish, made of oatmeal herbs, the insides of a lamb, all brewed, in the lining of a sheep's stomach.

The Hoolywood producers who voted to dismiss or suspend Communist employes and those cited for contempt of Congress, anticipate lawsuits from the employes affected. Their tentative defense will be violation of the moral turpitude clause in all contracts.

This week is "S.O.S." Week—the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee's campaign for food and clothing to be sent as supplies for overseas survivors. I was one of several people who made 1-minute transcriptions to be broadcast by 800 radio stations during the campaign. The transcription was made at the American Broadcasting Co. studios.

I started the transcription by clicking Hitler's telephone, the one he and Eva Braun used at Berchtesgaden. I own that telephone. The sound engineer held up his hand as a signal for me to stop. I was told—and the network sustained this ruling, lest there be a national walkout by all radio union members—that I would not be permitted to click Hitler's telephone, even in a recording for the benefit of the survivors of the Hitler terror, unless a union sound-effects man, at $9, was hired as a standby.

William I. Nichols, editor of This Week magazine, attended the preview of the Salvador Dali exhibition at the Bignew Galleries. The new Dali paintings include a few which feature the Dalicsque ruins. These are Dali's new ruins. They were suggested to him by Nichols, who showed him photos of the ruins of Warsaw and said: "Don't use the ancient Greek and Roman ruins as models. The twentieth century has produced better ruins." Dali borrowed the Warsaw photos and used them as models.

Dickie Wells, who once owned the foremost after-hours spot in Harlem, returns to show business this month as a dancer at the Club Ebony.

Alice B. Toklas, who is living in the Paris apartment she shared with the late Gertrude Stein, is spending her time now writing a cookbook. She has assured her friends that she does not intend to leave Paris, where she's been living since 1907 . . . Miss Toklas was born and raised in Seattle. When, after a short stay in Paris, she decided to live there forever, Gertrude Stein asked her why and Miss Toklas replied: "Paris is wonderful. Paris is the Seattle of Europe."

THICKER HAIR WITHIN 6 MONTHS!
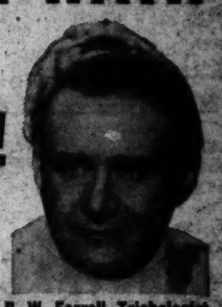
—with treatments that are pleasant as a shampoo!


R. W. Farrell, Trichologist
Just think of it! Persons accepted for treatment can be absolutely sure of wonderful thicker hair within only 6 months! Think what a difference in your appearance. Think what a worry off your mind! And treatments are so pleasant, too. No greasy salves. No sticky ointments. No foul-smelling chemicals. HAIR EXPERTS' scientific treatments are clean and refreshing as a shampoo!
You I take the short, weak "fuzz" of the caps accepted for treatment and stimulate it so that within six months it is replaced with strong hair on the way to normal healthy growth.
OUT Go the "Hair-Killers"!
A thicker head of hair for you calls for two things: First, we must clean out the hair-ravaging forces in your scalp. Second, we must revive the scalp's natural urge to produce hair (remember, you can't stop a normal healthy scalp from growing abundant hair!). Imbedded dandruff and bacteria swarms beneath the scalp must be routed. The hair-destroying "bottle bacillus" pityrosporum ovale, must be fought. Clogged hair-passages must be reopened. "Sleeping Blood Circulation" must be awakened, and roused to hair-growing activity.
Thicker Hair for a Lifetime!
To accomplish these results, we use new Vigo-Liquids, Special Scalp Germicidals, and HAIR EXPERTS' exclusive "Two-Way Stimulation" technique. Once your scalp has been revived to hair-growing activity, you follow the simple professional Rules of Scalp Hygiene which we teach you and you can confidently expect to maintain your thicker, healthier, better-looking hair for life!
Your Hair is a Priceless Asset! Don't Gamble—See Us at Once
We urge you, please do not delay—Follicle Shrinkage might set in, virtually wrecking your hopes! Do as thousands of smart, modern, up-to-date people are doing—take hair treatments! You'll actually enjoy HAIR EXPERTS' brisk "scalp workouts" administered by friendly attendants in cheery private offices. Clip out our phone number and address now and phone or come in today. Let's get acquainted, and let's get started!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Paratroopers Needlessly Lost'

By Drew Pearson

One of the most tragic blunders of the war was the shooting down of 800 American paratroopers by Allied gunners over Sicily. After losing 23 United States transport planes loaded with 400 paratroopers on July 13, 1943, we lost 21 planes loaded with almost 400 men on July 14 —chiefly shot down by Allied gunners.

Although this Maj. Gen. Meyers column published some of the facts at the time, part of the story of this tragic loss was hushed up by wartime censorship.

How tyrannical a military system can be and how it can crack down on anyone who wants to expose mistakes is illustrated not merely by the Gen. Benny Meyers scandal, but by the scandal of the paratroopers lost over Sicily.

Tried to Tell

In the case of the needlessly killed paratroopers, one man who tried to prevent future tragedies of this kind—Lieut. Col. David Laux—was exiled to the Army's Siberia.

Another officer, Brig. Gen. Ray Aloysius Dunn, who protested against failure to safeguard paratroopers over Sicily, was broken to the rank of colonel and sent to the Pacific.

Burned to Cinders

Small group of officers tried to get paratrooper transport planes equipped with armor plate around the pilot's seat and with self-sealing gasoline tanks. Without self-sealing tanks, a bullet penetrating the transport's gas tanks caused it to burst into flames. The paratroopers inside were burned to cinders before they had half a chance to bail out.

Efforts to get this protection on transport planes were increased after the Sicilian tragedy.

This paratrooper protection was approved by Maj. Gen. P. L. Williams and by Col. Ralph Bagby, Chief of Staff of Airborne Infantry in the Mediterranean. Finally an order was written and sent to Gen. Bennett Meyers, in charge of airplane procurement. He was to install self-sealing tanks in paratroop transports.

But nothing happened. Finally Colonel Laux, one of the officers who had seen men murdered over Sicily, sat down and wrote a letter to Secretary of War Stimson. Laux took the letter to Stimson's home and delivered it personally to Mrs. Stimson.

Next morning, he was ordered to Nome, Alaska.

Text of Laux Letter

This columnist has now obtained a copy of Laux's letter, dated June 1, 1944. Pertinent portions follow:

"In commenting upon the loss of troop-carrier aircraft at Catania, Sicily, last July 13-14, you stated: 'To say that the Army will tolerate blundering or endeavor to cover it up is simply not true.'

"In view of your statement," continued Colonel Laux, "I feel confident that you would not tolerate the situation which exists in connection with self-sealing tanks for troop-carrier aircraft, if you knew the facts.

"When Mr. Lovett (then Assistant Secretary of War for Air, now Undersecretary of State) indicated that Drew Pearson was about to release an article showing that the Army Air Forces were asleep at the switch on this subject, I was directed by my immediate superior to prepare a defense for the Army Air Forces in these words:

" 'Even though we all recognize the necessity for self-sealing tanks in troop-carrier aircraft, that is not the point. The Army Air Forces are being attacked and our job is to protect The Chief (Gen. Hap. Arnold). It is now up to us to present all the reasons why we should not have self-sealing tanks.'

"I declined to prepare such a document . . .

'Little Short of Murder'

"I have recently completed 18 months' overseas duty, participating in both the Sicilian and Italian troop-carrier operations. At Catania, Sicily, on the night of July 13-14, I stood in the navigator's dome of the leading troop-carrier aircraft and watched the Navy and the enemy shoot down our planes.

"Consequently, I realize the necessity of self-sealing tanks to a degree that cannot be appreciated by anyone who has not gone into combat in troop-carrier aircraft. That belief is shared by every troop-carrier pilot and every troop-carrier officer who has been charged with the responsibility of sending men into combat.

"It is little short of murder. I have waged many battles within this headquarters in an effort to correct the situation—without success. However, a copy of the latest staff study on the subject is attached for your information.

"The actual record of self-sealing tanks for troop-carrier aircraft will show that they have been demanded consistently for a period of a year and a half—that the material is available—that the priority of other Air Force projects would not be affected—and that the tanks could have been produced and delivered to the United Kingdom in time for the coming invasion."

If Secretary for Air Symington really wants to clean up brass-hat blunders, he might call Colonel Laux to get the full story.

True Test

The size of wage or salary
Or prominence on earth . . .
Is not the true criterion . . .
Of what a man is worth . . .
He may be very wealthy or . . . A pauper and obscure . . .
And yet in value to the world
. . . His place may be secure
. . . The more important thing in life . . . Is what he tries to do . . . And how he helps another soul . . . To see the struggle through . . . How much he shares his all with those . . . Who need his timely aid . . . That they may have the courage and . . . The strength to make the grade
. . . It matters not how large or small . . . His pocketbook may be . . . But only what he tries to do . . . For his community.
